Total loss to schools........... 89,910.77
Total loss to State 55,896.25

Grand total loss.............$436,255.69

Members of the People's Fund and Welfare Association and the St. Louis Single Tax League showed the City Board of Equalization Monday how the revenue of the city, the public schools and the State could be greatly increased.

The method they suggest is the assessment of certain corporation property, and valuable real estate upon the same basis as other property. They show by five instances of what they declare is inadequate assessment that the city has lost $290,449.67, the public schools $89,910.77 and the State $55,896.25 during the last year.

The matter came before the Board of Equalization in the shape of a formal petition presented by William Preston Hill, William H. Priesmeyer and John J. McCann, representing the People's Fund and Welfare Association, and Joseph Forshaw, C. H. Osterwisch, Henry Priesmeyer, S. L. Moser, E. L. Meyer and S. M. Ryan, representing the Single Tax League.

The petition was prepared by Mr. McCann and was read by him to the board Monday morning.

As a preface to the facts set forth, the petition quotes the constitution and statutes of the State and the city charter on the assessment of property and the duty of assessors. Following this a general charge is made against the district assessors of the city:

"That notwithstanding the laws aforesaid, the district assessors of said city of St. Louis, following an unregulated, vicious and corrupt custom, * * * * * * and neglected to make the assessment, during the past year 1899, of property in said city subject to taxation for the present year 1900, in the letter or spirit of or according to the mandates of the constitution and statutes."

The petition then proceeds to show specifically seven instances of failure by the assessors to fulfill the letter and the spirit of the law.

The first case cited is that of the Laclede Gaslight Co. It is stated that, at the lowest quotations of the New York and St. Louis stock markets the stocks, bonds, mortgages and gold notes of this company were worth, in May, 1899, when the assessment was made for the taxes of 1900, $17,897,500. The net earnings of the company during the last year amounted to $999.153, or 5 per cent on an investment of $19,983,060. It is alleged that the chief item of value to the company is its franchise to use the streets, which, if rented out, would yield the city a large revenue. The assessment of the property of the company for the taxes of 1900 is $2,005,000, leaving $15,982,000 exempt or not assessed. It is argued from this that the city has lost during the last year on this company alone, $207,772.50; that the schools have lost, $63,970, and that the State has lost $39,956.

It is alleged that the value of the holdings of the company is $6,078,000, and that for the taxes of this year it was assessed at $787,806, leaving $5,290,194 exempt, or not assessed. This entailed a loss to the city of $68,772.52; to the schools of $21,607.76, and to the State of $13,225.48.

The petition then names five pieces of real estate in the business district owned by John A. Scudder, Enoch Price, F. and C. Erskine, John W. Kauffman and the Drummond and Investment Co., which, it is alleged, are under-assessed. The rental values of these pieces of property are given and the losses to the city, schools and State are caculated from the difference between the real value and the assessed value. The losses are: To city, $13,904.65; to schools, $4333.01; to State, $2713.77.

The petition then calls attention to the recent message of the Mayor in which the need of revenue is emphasized. It also calls attention to the fact that the State Board of Equalization has established a precedent for the assessment of franchises by assessing the street railway franchises of the State.

The petition was filed with the board. A similar petition was presented last year, but no attention was paid to it by the board.

DAZZLED THE TENDERLOIN

Massachusetts Man Makes a Record 300 Bottles of Champagne in Six Days.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Horace Childs, 50 years old, a Massachusetts boot and shoe manufacturer, was one of the patients discharged from Bellevue yesterday.

Mr. Childs came to New York on March 27. For nearly a week he dazzled Broadway and made things in the Tenderloin whirl. On April 4 he arrived in a cab at Bellevue. There he told of having created a new record of 300 bottles of champagne in six days.

When his brain cooled Mr. Childs sent a telegram to his bank to stop payment on a few checks payable to New York women.

Mr. Childs only had $4 when he arrived at the hospital, but in an inside pocket the nurses found a certified check for $1000.

BUSHNELL ON TIMELY TOPICS.

Gives Some Views at St. Louis on Porto Rico.

ISLAND DESERVES FREE TRADE.

THE OHIOAN NOT A CANDIDATE FOR ANYTHING.

Speaks a Good Word for the World's Fair and "Damns by Faint Praise" Certain Faces of the Administration.

BY GOV. BUSHNELL AT ST. LOUIS.

I believe the feeling of a large percentage of the Republicans of Ohio is that Porto Rico should have free trade. The United States should have full and exclusive ownership of the Nicaragua Canal. It seems that the wise men of the Administration think otherwise.

I am certainly not a candidate for anything.

The coinage question will be dead for six years at least.

I want to say a good word for your World's Fair.

Former Gov. Asa S. Bushnell of Ohio, the inveterate political enemy of President McKinley and Senator Marcus A. Hanna, and one of the most influential Republicans in his State, is registered at the Planters' Hotel with Mrs. Bushnell.

He is on his way to his home in Springfield from Hot Springs, Ark., where he went a month ago for his health. The rest and baths at the resort greatly improved his condition, and now he feels able to return to his business duties. His stop-over in St. Louis was enforced as he failed to make proper train connections. He will continue his journey Monday evening.

The Governor retired from office a few weeks ago, and says his present plans are to remain out of active politics. However, he has not forgotton the ancient feud that exists between himself on the one hand and the President and "Boss" Hanna on the other, and, in a conversation with the Post-Dispatch Monday, he showed that his memory on that particular feature of his political career is clear.

He has an interesting manner of expressing his hostility to his opponents and their administration. He does not resort to bitter phrases and open "roasts," but "damns by faint praise."

His sentiments are to be read between the words rather than in them. It's what he does not say but leaves for inference that he means. An illustration of his method:

"Governor, what is your idea of the Porto Rican tariff bill?"

"Well, I haven't thought very much about it. I have read a great deal on it, but have not had the time to consider it carefully. But I believe I am safe in saying that the feeling of a large percentage of Ohio Republicans is that, as Porto Rico is a part of the United States, it should have free trade. However, there seems to be a theory among certain of our Republican Senators that it is a good thing, and I suppose that the discontented ones should consider that they know best what course to pursue."

Another illustration:

"Do I think that the United States should have full and exclusive ownership of the Nicaragua Canal? I certainly do. I do not believe that there should be any partnership in that affair. But it seems from the pending treaty that the wise men of the Administration think otherwise. Maybe they are right."

"I am out of politics so far as holding public office is concerned. I certainly am not a candidate for anything. But, nevertheless, I retain my interest in the welfare of the Republican party, and I am still ready to do my part to help it to success. My political career has been very pleasant, although it has been somewhat disturbed at times by considerable riffles and I do not regret it. If I had my life to live over again I would adopt the course I have pursued in every detail.

"The issues of the present campaign will be the prosperity of the country and the general successful management of public affairs by the Administration on behalf of the Republicans and anti-imperialism and anti-trust on behalf of the Democrats. The coinage question cannot be revived. It will be dead for six years, at least, and it would be folly for the Democrats to attempt to resurrect it at this time. I do not know who President McKinley's running mate will be, but the conditions demand that he come from New York. Whoever makes up the ticket there is no possibility of Republican defeat.

"I want to say a good word for your World's Fair. I know little about its scope, but such things are always good for the communities in which they are held. It is true that they rarely return in money what they take out. But that is not the consideration. There is a moral and intellectual, as well as a commercial, benefit to be achieved. It is frequently true that what does most good, that is, raises and elevates the moral sensibilities and cultivates the better nature, brings little or no commerical return. Hence, a great exhibition enterprise like that which St. Louis contemplates does its real good, not through the bank accounts of its citizens, but through their minds and hearts.

"If the latter are broadened and deepened, it does not matter if the former shrinks considerably. We are going to have a Centennial Celebration of the admission of Ohio to the Union in 1902, and, consequently, we feel a cordial sympathy for St. Louis in its Louisiana Purchase Celebration movement."

LOVED THE WHITE MAN BEST

Death of a Negro Woman 100 Years Old Who Had Much Experience in Matrimony.

RAIN WILL COME,

DR. RICHARD HYATT WILL "TRY, TRY, AGAIN."

HIS WEATHER-WORN ADAGE.

The Official Prognosticator Argues That Rain Did Fall on Sunday, Several Drops at 5:40.

There's a little adage, Hyatt, and I recommend you try it,
 In these days when you call for rain,
For although the sky is sunny, your wrong guesses won't seem funny,
 If you
 "Try,
 Try
 Again!"

If at first you fail to hit it, do not say "Och, Gee!, 'rauss mit it!'"
 And think that your efforts are vain;
Just keep on with your wet weather; you and rain will get together,
 If you
 "Try,
 Try
 Again!"

"If at first you don't succeed," it runs—be careful that you heed it—
 Do not look in high disdain,
Tho' the sun in force is shining, do not give up to repining,
 But just
 "Try,
 Try
 Again!"

In the private lexicon of Dr. Richard Hyatt, weather prophet, there is no such word as quit. When he predicts one brand of weather for a certain day and another variety appears, he simply smiles and continues the prognostication for the following day.

If, again, the exact style of weather called for fails to materialize, this imperturbable scientist calmly announces that there has been an unavoidable delay somewhere, but that the especial line of weather ordered will surely arrive if the people will only wait for it long enough.

This happy characteristic of the local forecaster has been aptly illustrated the last few days. On Friday, he ordered showers for Saturday. As he mopped the prespiration from his bulging brow Saturday, he vowed that the rain fall would be here Sunday. Monday he said that the showers would very likely be here in a day or two.

But the doctor is by no means inclined to agree with the popular view of his recent prophetic efforts.

In fact, a flush of virtuous indignation mantled his classic features when it was intimated in his presence Monday morning that his Palm Sunday prognostications had not been fulfilled.

"I am astonished that any good citizen of St. Louis should labor under the delusion that it did not rain yesterday," he exclaimed to the Post-Dispatch, in chilling tones. "Because it actually did rain. The drops began to fall at exactly 5:40 by the official clock and continued for about three-quarters of an hour.

"To be honest with you, though, I must admit that the rainfall was distressingly light. In fact, I am not able to give you any figures on the total precipitation.

"Even our most delicate instruments were unable to take any actual measurements of it, and I fear it must go down in history as simply a trace."

Dr. Hyatt then referred with evident pride to the fact that there had been a good rain at Springfield, Mo., Sunday, and that it was also wet at Cairo, Ill., Memphis and Chattanooga. In the far West there was snow as well as rain.

The predictions for the immediate future are indefinite. The official advices say it will be partly cloudy Monday night and Tuesday, and that unsettled weather will follow.

BIRDS FLEW NOT BUT ESCAPED.

A Housewrecking Explosion Missed Parrot and Canaries.

PARROT REFUSES TO TALK.

CAUSE OF THE EXPLOSION IS NOT KNOWN.

Second Story of Charles Mark's House at 2129 Clark Avenue Demolished While the Family Was Away From Home.

Four birds now on the verge of nervous prostration might reveal the mysterious cause of a terrific explosion in the home of their master, Charles Marks, tailor, 2129 Clark avenue, Sunday afternoon, if they had sufficiently recovered from the shock.

The feathered portion of the household were the only eye-witnesses of the devastation, but as it happens, the parrot, the only one of the colony that can talk English, has become strongly morose, and therefore an object of suspicion to Mr. Marks, who has locked him in the cellar in disgrace.

Every bird escaped unscathed, although the Marks household effects were blown out into the street, leaving the two canaries and the "devil bird," as Mr. Marks calls the parrot, still suspended in their cages, along the walls.

The fireman attributed the explosion to leakage of gas, but the inspectors for the Laclede Gas & Electric Light Co. report that there is no indication of defective jets or piping, so that Mr. Marks is hopeless unless he can starve and cajole the parrot into a confession.

The worthy tailor is confounded over the conduct of his parrot pet, not knowing whether to attribute it to guilty complicity of the inborn contrariness of the tribe.

Aside from the miraculous experience of the birds, the explosion is no ordinary casualty. The Marks dwelling looks like a landmark of the great St. Louis cyclone. The entire second story front was taken out by the force of the concussion. On the sidewalk below the wreckage is piled knee deep. Bricks, mortar, furniture, bric-a-brac, clothing and what not lie in a tangled maze.

Above, in the demolished rooms, there are twisted chandeliers and unshattered mirrors, crushed bedsteads and untouched china pieces; and, strangest of all, indented bird cages, yet living though bewildered birds.

A large portion of the rear wall of the same story was whisked away, as though by some reflex action of the wave. Everything in the rear room is in utter confusion.

The Marks family closed the house about 8 o'clock in the evening and went away. Mrs. Marks is certain that she left one gas jet burning. The birds were the only living occupants of the house. A big watch-dog held forth in the back yard. Everything was in perfect order. The caged pets were pruning for their night's repost, and Nettie, the parrot, repeated her saucy "Pretty little girl" as Mrs. Marks poked her head through the door to take once last look.

Half an hour later, when they returned there was a great crowd in front of the house and the fire department was making ready to leave the scene.

Mrs. Marks' first thought was of the pets. She hurried into the house and found them all in a state of wild alarm. The canaries were huddled, trembling with fright, on the bottoms of the cages. They greeted her with shrill screams. Mr. Marks turned to the parrot for an explanation, but the "devil bird" was silent, haughty and mysterious. A diagnosis showed that he was uninjured, but evidently shocked—mentally shocked and indignant.

The loss on the building is estimated at $1000 and $300 on the furniture.

COTTON BELT TRAIN WRECKED,

Three Men Seriously and One Fatally Injured.

CRUSHED UNDER AN ENGINE.

ATTEMPT THOUGHT TO HAVE BEEN MADE BY ROBBERS.

Passenger Train Thrown on a Siding, Where the Engineer, Firemen and Head Brakeman Were Hurt, Near Bearden, Ark.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PINE BLUFF, Ark., April 9.—A disastrous wreck occurred on the Cotton Belt at Best, five miles north of Bearden, last night at 9:30 o'clock, and, as a result, three men are seriously, and one perhaps fatally, wounded, and an entire crew are badly shaken and bruised.

A special freight, which left here, going south Sunday afternoon, ran into an open switch and on to the siding of the Cotton Belt Lumber Co. The engine, No. 292, is a big Richmond 10-wheeler, and broke through the light rails of the siding. It rolled over on one side, and Engineer John Mahar, Fireman J. G. Frazell and Head Brakeman Taylor, all of this city, were caught beneath the engine.

Taylor's skull was fractured and a large piece of bone has been taken out. He suffered the greatest injury and will likely die. The other two men were stunned, bruised and very badly scalded. They were brought home this morning on No. 4 passenger, which was delayed eight hours by the wreck.

It is certain that no train crew left the switch open, and the only solution is that an attempt was made to wreck the passenger train, as the keys to the switch were gone.

Should the guilty parties be found they will be summarily dealt with, as indignation at the scene of the wreck is running very high. Conductor Graham was in charge of the train.

THE BURGLAR LEFT A NOTE

Thief Who Annexed Two Dollars and a Square Meal Wrote an Explanation to His Victim.

BURGLAR TO HIS VICTIM.

"* * * I am aiming at St. Louis, where I hope to get employment. I have not eaten for two days. Though weak, I was desperate and I determined to steal. You are the victim. I take $2 in cash, which, if I ever can, I will return."

A rare burglar was the one who entered the house of J. D. Hertling, near Barretts, St. Louis County, Friday night.

After eating a square meal from the family larder he rifled Mr. Hertling's trousers and took $2 in cash. The next morning this note was found on the kitchen table:

"To the Owner of the House: Dear Sir—I cannot commit my first criminal act without some expression of the circumstances which led up to it. I came of a good family in Kansas, but was forced to leave home through a scrape for which I was only partially to blame. I have walked every foot of the way from Kansas City to here and am aiming at St. Louis, where I hope to get employment. I have not eaten for two days. Though weak, I was desperate, and I determined to steal. You are the victim. I take $2 in cash, which, if I ever can, I will return."

Mr. Hertling said he would not prosecute the burglar should be captured.

LORD ROBERTS' ARMY HAS LOST ITS LEGS.

Lack of Horses Practically Bottles Up the British at Bloemfontein.

BRABANT IS HEMMED IN.

THE COLONIAL ROUGH RIDER SAID TO BE CLOSELY INVESTED BY THE BOERS.

BURGHERS FULL OF DASH.

Strict Censorship of the News Prevents the World From Learning the Full Gravity of the Situation in South Africa.

BRITISH LOSS IS 20,000.

England has lost fully 20,000 men since the war began. The figures below give an analysis of the losses:

Killed in battle	2,591
Loss by disease	1,207
Wounded in Hospital	9,349
Captured by Boers	4,525
Sick in hospitals	1,300
Total	20,677

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, April 9.—"Lord Roberts' army has lost its legs." This laconic sentence, the expression of veteran British officers, explains the inactivity of the British commander at Bloemfontein, who, for the past month has done nothing but lose men and horses.

His army is afoot—practically without cavalry and field artillery, and because of these conditions he is almost bottled up in Bloemfontein. Disease has carried off his horses, and the thin clothing of his army, not adapted to the climate at this season, has caused the hospitals to fill up rapidly.

The Boers seem to think that they have the South African Gulliver tied down at last, and roam at will within cannon shot of Roberts' headquarters.

The activity of the Boers southeast and southwest of Bloemfontein is amazing, the commands seemingly coming and going throughout a wide region as they please, but skillfully avoiding strong bodies of British.

The retirement of the Irish Rifles from Rouxville to Aliwal leaves Gen. Brabant without communication with the other British forces. He has 2000 or 3000 colonials holding a fine defensive country, but he is apparently invested, so far as London knows. Telegraphic and railroad communication with Bloemfontein are kept up as usual, but nothing comes through for public consumption. Lord Roberts' last message was dated April 6, and the last unofficial message bore date of April 7. The absence of news as usual disheartens the people, and produces an altogether discouraging effect. The last unofficial message notes that good spirits at Bloemfontein are continuing and tells of the arrival of animals and two fresh cavalry regiments.

ROUGH RIDER BRABANT.

This is the commander of the British Cape Colony force, known as "Brabant's Horse." The General is a loyal colonist, who, at the opening of the war, declared he would lead his rough riders from the Orange River to Pretoria.

But one correspondent at Bloemfontein writes: "Last Tuesday many of the historic regiments like the Scots' Greys, the Inniskilling Dragoons and the Lancers could not muster 100 mounted men, while artillery horses were very scarce."

The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Times says:

"The Boers now stretch in a thin line from Sanna's Post on the south to a point east of Jagersfontein. The railway stations are amply protected, but their defense necessitates heavy patrolling work.

"The question of protecting the surrendered Free Staters is being solved by their reception into the military camps. Many are flocking here, but it is reported that the farms westward of the Capital are tenanted by women only, the men having rejoined the Boer commandos."

In the Orange Free State the situation is complex, with scanty material for forming a correct estimate of the situation, and the afternoon newspapers, not being in the confidence of the managers, are criticising the conduct of affairs as they see them. Thus the St. James Gazette, reviewing the army system, says:

"As a consequence of the foolish, sporting, boyish estimate of the work of the war, Gen. Buller is anchored indefinitely, as he must wait for transports until Lord Roberts is adequately supplied."

SCENE OF OPERATIONS ABOUT BLOEMFONTEIN.

WATERLESS SAND PLAINS OF ORANGE FREE STATE.

Sufferings of the British Soldiers in the Parched Region Where Lord Roberts' Army Is Operating.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 31.—Everybody remembers the famous picture of "Thirst," which portrays the gaunt, half-starved lion in the midst of the desert, lapping up the few remaining drops of moisture from an impoverished pool.

A correspondent in the Morning Post tells us that though the British soldier "has thirsted in the thirstiest corners of the globe, he admits the veldt to be a fresh experience. Aden, India, Egypt, the Soudan, but here is something not hotter, not drier, not dustier, but less endurable for some reason. It is the army and South Africa together, no doubt which is the cause, for men who have lived in Kimberley, Johannesburg, Bloemfontein and Natal are only now while campaigning acquiring the experience. The army, with its incessant tramping, and the ceaseless fog of dust that hangs about its camps. And to that must be added the compulsory life in the sun, the sun at its hottest and driest hours, the absence of shade, the parching suction of the sand, which is bed, chair and table.

It will be quite curious to live without a water bottle slung about one's shoulder. One can scarcely remember the day when water was not regarded with reverence and jealous envy when it could be made to run clear, continuous and unvalued by a turn of the finger. Here, when one knows by tired limbs the weight of what one drinks, the thought of water flowing through pipes seems a dream of paradise. And such water. Water through which one could see, which left no mud at the bottom of the mug and did not stain what it was spilt on. One remembers that in England they analyze that kind of water. Why, the water we drink here is often too thick

COLORADO STILL RAGING; OTHER RIVERS FALLING.

Loss of life 30 to 50.

Loss of Property $3,000,000.

Austin suffers most.

Seventeen Counties affected.

Austin is without a water or light system.

Colorado is still rising, but other large rivers, like the Brazos, are falling.

One ranchman lost $20,000 worth of cattle.

Every wagon bridge on the Colorado, between Austin and Columbus, 150 miles, has been destroyed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex., April 9.—Loss of life by the flood in the Colorado is now estimated at less than 50.

Owing to the vast expanse of country submerged in the Colorado Valley and those of that stream's tributaries, the names of not more than one-half the victims can be given. Those known have already been furnished the newspapers. Every hour, however, brings reports of bodies floating gulfward in the Colorado below Austin.

The names of the five strangers drowned in the Concho on Saturday last north of San Angelo are not yet known and that section of the State is still impenetrable because of the high waters.

The Colorado is still rising and the river is four feet above the highest reached during the memorable flood of last year. All the wires along the Missouri, Kansas and Texas road south of Temple have been lost to-day.

At Bastrop the record of high water is again broken and the town is entirely cut off.

Railroad operations in the southern half of the State are impeded. Weather reports from all over the southern and southwestern Texas sections are threatening more rain.

To-day fully 30,000 people gathered at the dam and power house stationed north of this city to witness the ruins of the plant which cost this city one and three-quarter millions of dollars a few years ago. The waters of the Colorado River were still plunging and foaming around the wreck, eating away the big pile of granite which once formed the dam, as though it was nothing more than chalk rock. So fierce was the current that great boulders were carried half a mile from the dam, being rolled over and over by the turbulent tide. The power house which succumbed to the terrific wash of the water at 2 o'clock Sunday morning lies a mass of wreckage on the edge of the river, all the valuable machinery either having been thrown into the river or badly damaged by the falling timbers of the power house. The wreck of the plant is complete.

The situation in the city is most serious. The wreckage of the plant means that it will take several weeks to secure even a temporary water and light system if it can be made possible even then. In the meantime the city will be in a bad sanitary condition. All the hotels, private residences, stores and the like are without water, and there is no fire protection. Churches were unable to hold services yesterday for want of light, and all public meetings were abandoned. The daily newspapers are handicapped in their publications, being deprived of their electric power.

In Williamson County, north of here, railroad bridges and tracks have been laid waste and all trains have stopped running. Hundreds of head of cattle have been drowned and miles of fencing torn down and washed away. In Bastrop County and in the southern portion of this county similar conditions prevail, everything being under water, and much loss of property is reported.

The country tributary to the Colorado River all the way down its course is being inundated, and while it is believed the worst is over the loss, as estimated, will exceed $3,000,000, counting Austin as the largest loser Fortunately the list of drowned may not exceed 30 to 50.

There were no trains operated on the Inland Great Northern, as much of its track and quite a number of bridges were washed away during last night. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad is also a heavy sufferer from a like cause.

Reports from several sections of Central and Southern Texas are that a large acreage is under water and much damage has been suffered in property and live stock.

As a rule the Texas rivers are now falling, and there is not much danger of a general flood. The crops have been damaged over a wide area, but there is still time for farmers to replant if they can get the seed. Corn has been planted over once and will have to be planted the third time. The farmers, as a rule, have not planted much cotton, because the heavy rains have kept them out of the fields. The railroads have lost many small bridges, and it will be a week before the traffic resumes its normal condition.

Smithville reports tremendous rains nave fallen throughout that section, the main flood in the Colorado from the break in the great Austin dam reaching there to-day. The river is rising one foot an hour.

Cameron reports the flood in Little River now equals that of last July. The water works and power house have been overflowed. People were warned and no loss of life is reported. Brushy, San Gabriel and Little Rivers are all overflowed, causing the entire destruction of all crops.

A special from Rio Grande City announces the total destruction of the corn crop in the Lower Rio Grande bottom lands. Officials of the International & Great Northern Railroad report that all trains will be running on good time by Monday. The Aransas Pass Railroad has resumed its passenger service.

Advices from Del Rio and several other points on the Rio Grande show that that river is on one of the greatest rampages in its history. The valley south from Del Rio for a distance of 200 miles is flooded. It is thickly populated by Mexican families, and a number of drownings are feared. At Del Rio and points below, rescuing parties have been out in boats all day rescuing water-bound Mexicans and Americans. The erratic river has already made several material changes in its course, cutting off large strips of land from Mexico and then from the United States, and vice versa.

The International Water Boundary Commission will have much work to do when the present flood subsides. It is expected that the flood will do much damage to the United States Government reservations at Fort Ringgold and Fort Brown. Both these reservations suffered severely from the flood in the Rio Grande last June.

There are many irrigated farms along the Rio Grande. All these are floodswept.

Thomas Henderson, a ranchman, lost 700 head of beef cattle in Concho County. They were valued at $20,000. This is only one of many similar losses.

There are several small settlements along the valley of the Colorado in San Saba, Burnett and Llano counties, and it is feared the loss of life there will be heavy.

It is below Austin, for a distance of 200 miles, that the greatest havoc has been wrought by the Colorado River flood, which started from here yesterday. Reports show that the wall of water descended on the homes of hundreds of families without warning. Almost every wagon road bridge across the river between here and Columbus, 150 miles south, was destroyed.

The Colorado River is not the only West Texas stream that is on a rampage. The Concho, the Guadalope, the San Marcos, the Llano, the Nueces and the Hondo Rivers are out of their banks and are flooding hundreds of thousands of acres of cultivated lands.

BREAKING OF THE GREAT DAM

An Eye-Witness Describes the Scene Attending the Calamity at Austin.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 9.—Mr. Jefferson McLemore, who was an eye-witness to the collapse of the dam at Austin, thus describes the great catastrophe:

"I was gazing intently at the great body of water as it swept gracefully over the crest of the dam, carrying with it acres of drift that parted as it went down the falls. The water over the crest was more than ten feet in depth, and was rising at the rate of eighteen inches an hour. The fall of the water was about 40 feet and the roaring and surging was awful. Nothing in my opinion, could in any measure compare with it except the falls of Niagara.

"While thus looking with awe on a sight such as I had never before witnessed, I noticed a sudden commotion of the waters near the center of the dam. For a moment the water where the commotion occurred seemed to recede, but it was only for a moment. It then shot upward with a tremendous spout to a height of perhaps 50 feet, as if in gleeful fury, and I saw that the dam was giving way. The commotion spread toward the east end of the dam and there was a trembling of the earth.

"Suddenly, above the dismal roar of the surging, raging waters there came a cry 'The dam is breaking; the dam is breaking.' The sound of the cry was as dismal as that of the maelstrom.

"When the break occurred the distance from the crest of the wave, as it rolled over the dam to the water below, was about 40 feet. Imagine then, if you can, a body of water 40 feet in height, 1400 feet in width and 30 miles in length, suddenly released from confinement, and you will have a faint idea of the scene that I witnessed as the dam across the Colorado River gave way.

"Once released from its confinement the water subsided rapidly, seeking a level with that below the dam, and then it was seen how the break occurred.

"The dam was not toppled over, as many supposed it would be, but instead, a large section, beginning near the center and extending toward the east bank, was moved bodily down the stream a distance of at least 40 feet. Another section, extending to within 30 feet of the head gate masonry on the east end was also moved down stream a distance of 40 or 50 feet. Between these two displaced sections there was a gap of about 100 feet, where the dam had completely disappeared, and it was not long before the section nearest the center also crumbled and disappeared. Had the remaining displaced section also tumbled down the power house, which went down a few hours later would possibly have been saved. As it was, this section threw a heavy current against the power house, which eventually undermined the west wall of the building and caused it to collapse."

DAMAGE ALONG THE COAST.

The Tarpon Club Property on St. Joseph Island Injured.

DALLAS, Tex., April 9.—E. H. R. Green, son of Mrs. Hetty Green, and president of the Tarpon Club of the coast, has received telegrams from Rockport of heavy damage to club property on St. Joseph Island. By a severe storm in Matagorda Bay, along Matagorda Peninsula and Matagorda Island, a number of small vessels were wrecked and some lives are believed to have been lost.

THE FARMERS SING FOR CORN IS KING!

This year, King Corn and the farmer shrewd
Will own the earth and its daily food;
The big, coarse grain is the real thing now.
And wheat is nowhere, we must allow;
The price goes up like the stalks in spring,
And this is the Corn King's song they sing;

Yellow is the gold, the grain;
Western farmers crow again.
Corn is king,
The welkin ring!
Spread the news with might and main!

Then all hands 'round in a merry whirl;
And for'd and back, in a swing and swirl!
The mortgage's lifted; the debts are paid.
The big crops did it, with prices' aid;
We've done our work, now we'll have our fling—
And this is the Corn King's song we sing:

Yellow is the gold, the grain;
Western farmers crow again.
Corn is king,
The welkin ring!
Spread the news with might and main!

If there ever was a time in the world's history when corn was king, it is now. Prices are up near the 40-cent mark; the demand is strong, and the farmer is sitting back, with his cribs full, holding for prices that suit him, while the "shorts" are squealing like so many porkers caught in tight corners of a stake-and-rider fence. Or if Mr. Farmer is sold out, he is looking forward to a fine crop, and a demand that will not be satisfied, while Famine walks the land in India, and millions of bushels will not pay his tribute.

Corn is about one-third higher than it was six months ago. This rise has come gradually, but surely. Because it came so slowly it was not till lately that it was noticed. But now!

In figures, this advance means about $203,000,000 on the annual crop, or about $3 to every man, woman and child in the United States.

ROBERTS' ARMY HAS LOST ITS LEGS.

even to filter One cannot pump it through a Berkfelt candle.

"At Ramdam there was a big pond—what was left of moisture in the dam. One bathed in it only under the most pressing compulsion of cleanliness. The water was very shallow, but the mud was black and deep. One sank to the knees if one tried to walk, and so sat gently half in mud and half in brown syrup and thanked God for water. One rose from it with the green leeches hanging about one's body like bits of seaweed, and with a sprinkling of a less known insect.

"Horses looked askance at that pool, but the men drank of it greedily and drank of it where alone they could reach it, where the horses' hoof had churned it into a blackish green liquor, thick as soup."

Here is a vignette from the field of battle: "Twenty yards to the left a man is lying, pressed flat to the ground. He is very much the ground color, and the occasional dust whirls over him have aided the disguise. There are little tufts of withered scrub, which help to hide him, though but a few inches high. The sun as been blazing on his back and the sand about him for seven hours, and the veldt wavers confusedly in the glare of the heat. A pale blue lake of mirage has formed about the furthest kopjes and left them like dark islands in the sky. The man on the left feels gingerly for the tin bottle which lies under his elbow, his fingers spread over its felt covering, and gives it a gentle shake. The shake is repeated and he begins to draw the bottle slowly under him, keeping his body rigidly stiff. The job is a long one, because the bottle strap catches in his accoutrements and he dare not move to free it. When he has it at last beneath him, he begins to turn over as slowly as he has done all else. He lifts his foot a few inches, tries a spit of dust sand beside him not much more than an arm's length away. He keeps his eyes on the mark the bullet has made and remains for some moments as if it had turned him to stone. Then, with a more laborious patience he resumes his movement until, at last, he is on his back and has the bottle above him. It holds only a few hot drops, but he thought he had drained even them an hour, and his tongue is like a piece of fur in his mouth. He got, with a rush, to the place he occupies about 8 o'clock in the morning, when a sudden crackle from the river in front of him laid the whole line on its face, where it has remained, with occasional wriggling forward, ever since. He is on the right of his company and alone, for the man next him, after chaffing the Boer shooting for half an hour, began suddenly to whimper and has been still ever since.

He failed himself to take the bullets humorously, but he grew used to them, till one came between his face and the ground and struck his belt buckle. Then he cursed them and was afraid, till he lost all other feelings in the awful sense of thirst.

"He knows the action is still going on, for he can hear the steady pounding of a battery from the hill behind him, and sudden scurries of rifle fire beyond the river to the left. He knows too, from those hateful spits of dust, that the Boer is still behind the bushes in front of him, but the Boer is always behind something, and he is tired of trying to shoot and being shot at by a man whom he never sees. Besides, if he lifts his rifle the dust begins to jump again, and the rifle barrel is scalding hot, the varnish is sizzling on the stock as though it stood before a fire, and to touch it seems to quicken his unbearable thirst.

"He tries to guess at the hour as the sun goes over, and falls on his left side. He writes words in the sand with his fingers and rubs them out, bewilders an ant which runs with its bundle of food in front of him, does anything he can to keep from thinking of the maddening drouth within him. What he really thinks o, God knows.

"I lay there blarsting them Boers so long as I can remember," said one who had lost consciousness after eight hours of that kind of fighting, and his attitude was probably characteristic. But cursing is not cool work, and dries a man already drouthy, while still the crackle of fire comes from the river and death stands before a drink. At last, while there are still some three hours of daylight, the patter of rifles along the dongas on the further bank grows more and more hurried, till it runs into a continuous roll. A last determined, disastrous attempt is being made to push back the enemy's right. The Seaforths, Cornwalls and Canadians, mixed together, are clambering, leaping, blundering forward across the deep intricate channels of the dong beds.

The man on the other side of the river only knows of what is going forward by the swell and spread of the fire. Five minutes and it has sunk again to the snap, snap of solitary rifles. What has happened? Whose are the bodies in those pits of death? Where is the enemy and where the friend? He has not the least idea. If things have gone well there will be fresh orders probably, but no orders come.

"At 6 o'clock he had been 12 hours under fire; his last meal was a biscuit, 15 hours back, when he had fallent in at 3 o'clock in the morning, after marching all the day before. But he is aware neither of weariness nor of hunger in the fever of his thirst. The flesh of his face, stained brown by the sun, has a dry, twisted look, like the parched stem of a scrub, though all the moisture had been wrung from it. One grows to know that look out here. His fingers never leave his water bottle, nor his eyes the green fringe of bush along the river. Another hour and the guns about him cease firing, and a new fight seems to be beginning far away on the right. The sun is going down, and he can see nothing to the left of him, but a hot gold glare of dust.

"Then out of it a man leaps and makes a dash forward toward the river. There is a sharp ring of an order to stop him and almost with it the quick stammer of a dozen shots, and the man swings around and pitches forward on his back. The battle grows louder on the right, a Howitzer battery has come into action, brownish, puffs of lyddite are bursting along the kopje. But the man lying in the scrub pays no heed to it. His arms are spread out flat, his fingers dug into the sand. He is pulling himself slowly forward, his eyes glaring ahead through the scrub. When a bullet strikes near him, he stops a moment, but goes on again. So in half an hour he covers about 50 yards. He can see the cool hollow of the river but there is only brown grass along its banks and his one chance lies in a dash. He is on all fours for a spring, but he gets no further. A rifle has been following the faint trail of dust above him and he sinks down in a lump with a bullet through his head."

STORY OF FIVE COMPANIES

How the Boers Captured the British Expedition at De Wet's Dorp.

BETHANY, Saturday, April 7.—Gen. Catacre's force has returned here without having found any trace of the ill-fated British column captured by the Reddersburg commando. It is impossible to estimate the British losses, but as the men fought stubbornly, it is probably that they were large.

Gen. Gatacre arrived to late. Reddersburg was already reoccupied by the Boers and the enemy are now threatening the lines to the south.

The story of the capture is as follows:

The Royal Irish Rifles had been marching in the eastern part of the Free State collecting arms, and were returning to Bethany on Tuesday, when they were intercepted by a Boer commando, which had placed three guns in position. The Irish intrenched themselves, while the mounted infantry scouted along both flanks, only to find escape impossible.

The Boers opened with gun and rifle fire, The British replied sparingly with rifle fire, husbanding their cartridges in the hope that help would arrive.

Gradually the Boers drew into closer quarters. They fired intermittently during Tuesday night, but did not attempt to rush the British position until Wednesday, when the Irishmen, who had fought tenaciously, were suffering severely from want of food and water. By this time also the Rifles had expended their last cartridge.

Finding that there was no sign of succor, they surrendered, having fought for nearly 30 hours. They lost ten killed and many wounded. Among the captured is Capt. Tennant, Gen. Gatacre's chief intelligence officer.

ROBERTS' ARMY IS AFOOT

Lung Disease Attacks All Imported Horses and the Mounting of His Troops Is a Serious Problem.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Charles R. Hallett of London, who is now in Washington, says:

"I have been with an agent of the Government who is buying horses for the army a good deal within the past few days, and he tells me that 1000 of Roberts' horses were shot one day this week. The agent received the news along with a message urging him to make haste in purchasing. Primarily, the horse sickness is some lung disease, although it shows itself in a swelling of the whole head and a quick physical deterioration. The grass has no nourishment in it at this time of year, and this contributes to the condition of the horse. When he can no longer get about he stands around with his barrel-like head hanging low, almost between his forelegs. When he gets this bad he might as well be killed.

"The native horses are subject to this sickness, but not so bad as the imported horse. In fact, the native horse does not get disabled. The South African horse is a small and hardy animal and can stand a great deal. The fact that he is small means tht he does not have to eat much, and this is a great advantage. He is 'salted'; that is, he has usually gone through the horse sickness. The fresh horses are 'unsalted.'

"Mules are not afflicted with the horse sickness. If Roberts has a great many mules he may not be seriously handicapped by the horse sickness. If his transport is furnished largely with horses, it would not be surprising to hear of its almost total collapse. It gets very cold around Bloemfontein and winter is just coming on. The British troops are in for months of the hardest kind of service. There will be nothing heard of 'on to Pretoria' for some time."

AMERICAN SHIP OVERHAULED

Captain of the Sea Witch Expressed His Mind in Picturesque Language to the British Officers.

From Howard C. Hillegas, the Post-Dispatch Special Commissioner in South Africa.

(Copyright, 1900.)

LORENZO MARQUEZ, Delagoa Bay, March 1.—After evading the squadron of the war ships blockading this port and anchoring far in the bay the American clipper ship Sea Witch, laden with flour for the Transvaal, was boarded in Portuguese waters by a boat's crew from the British man-of-war Wasp early in the morning of Feb. 26.

The vessel was anchored about three miles inside of Portuguese waters. A boat's crew from Her Majesty's ship Wasp examined the ship's papers and cargo. Capt. Howes mistook the Lieutenant and his men for Portuguese officials and made no protest to them while they were examining his papers, but when they began looking over the cargo Mate Claxton became suspicious and asked questions.

"The Left'ant," said he afterward, "strutted around the deck as if he were cock of the walk and he made me confounded tired. He was a short Johnnie and wore his sword around his neck so that it would not touch the ground. I laughed to split my sides and he wanted to know what I was 'laughing at, old chap.' Then I knew he wasn't a Portuguese and saw that the ship he came from was flying a British flag.

"Then I got mad. Says I to him: 'What do you Britishers want on this ship?' He smirked a bit and asked me for a cigarette. That made my blood boil, and I stepped up to him and asked him whether he saw that American flag flying at the masthead. 'It's a bit frayed,' I said, 'but it's all right, you bet.'

"He groans in reply and then I went for him for fair. 'You see it or you may not, but I'll tell you that this ship is a bit of United States territory, and while the skipper is having his breakfast I am acting President. We may be floating pretty far away from our seat of government, but it will take a big sight smarter Britisher than you to bamboozle me. We treated you on the square and you tried to pull our leg by coming aboard a ship where you have no right. Now get off this ship of the United States territory and take your sword with you, or we'll have a new Majuba Hill right here.'"

The lieutenant withdrew from the Sea Witch immediately and when he came ashore he told a friend at the Club de Lorenzo Marquez that he never expected to escape from that bit of American territory.

"'Why, said he, 'the bloomin' Yank cursed so that I had to hold my ears shut.'"

ENGLISH LACK OF STRATEGY

Disaster at Spion Kop Scathingly Reviewed by a British Army Officer.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 31.—The officer with Gen. Buller who so scathingly described the disaster at Spion Kop, in "To-Day" continues his remarkable series with a denunciation as bitter as ever fell upon a general. This week his article is confined to a general review of the strategy, or rather lack of strategy, which preceded the relief of Ladysmith, and he includes a terrible indictment against the useless sacrifice of the Irish brigade, whose gallantry excited so much admiration in England.

"Yes," writes this officer, "Ladysmith has been relieved at last; we have been blundering along the line of hills that form that northern bank of the Tugela for many months; attempting to pass it at all sorts of impossible places, and suffering heavy loss each time. That is an accurate description of the ten weeks' campaign on the Tugela. No one knew the ground or took the trouble to learn it.

"As an example of this sublime indifference, Gen. Buller was not aware that Hlangwani Mountain, which commanded the crossing of the Tugela, was on the southern side of the river till he had failed in three different attempts. Yet he lived for weeks within three of four miles of the hill and at the battle of Colenso his right flank extended beyond it.

"As to strategy, there was none, neither good nor bad. The troops were moved along, and when a hill or an entrenchment appeared in front they were ordered to take it. Sometimes they failed, sometimes they succeeded; often when they had succeeded, after terrible loss, the post was found to be useless and was abandoned. This is the blind folly in which we have been engaged, and which, more through good luck than good management, has eventually succeeded. But had not Lord Roberts' victory drawn away a great part of the Boers for the defense of their own country it would never have succeeded and Ladysmith would have fallen. Thus weakened, the Boers had not force enough to occupy such a long defensive position, and one by one the strong places fell into our hands.

"On Friday, Feb. 23, Gen. Hart was ordered to send up the Connaught Rangers, the Inniskillings and the Dublins along the line of the railway to attack some low hills where the river turned again toward the east. The operation was most difficult and dangerous. Six companies of the Inniskillings and two companies of the Connaught Rangers formed the attacking lines; the remainder of the Rangers and half of the Dublins were in support; the reserve consisted of the other half of the Dublins. In this order the Irish brigade recrossed the railway and began the attack, coming at once under a severe cross-fire from the hills on the right and left. It was at such times that tactical errors led to such terrible loss of life. Some troops had indeed been sent to the hill on the left, but they were not ordered to push the attack and they could not, from their position, even see the northern slopes; they merely acted as sentries to prevent our being entirely cut off. Any one could see that it was madness to send an attacking force up the central hill, while the flanking hill was unoccupied, and the Boers thereon were left free to concentrate their fire for its defense.

"But stupid as was the scheme, the method adopted for its execution was even worse. Gen. Hart placed himself on a neighboring hill with a telescope and a bugler, so he was completely out of touch with the attack, and could not know when a rest was necessary or when an attack could profitably be pressed. These matters are felt only by the officers on the spot, and it is absolutely necessary to leave it to their discretion. There he stood, sounding at intervals the 'advance,' then the 'double' and the 'charge.' When it appeared to him that the attack was not proceeding rapidly enough to suit his taste, the bugle rang out again in peremptory tones.

"Our artillery, meanwhile, was shelling the trenches at the top of the hill and kept down the enemy's fire from that direction, so that the advance line got to within a hundred yards of what seemed to them to be the top, and waited for a moment to take breath, under cover of the steepness of the hill. Then, the general's bugler sounded the three calls 'advance,' 'double,' 'charge.' The word was passed along the ranks; bayonets were fixed, and springing to their feet the men dashed forward with a cheer.

"Not a shot was fired by the enemy and the place seemed to be deserted. The crest was reached and passed, and the triumph seemed complete. But alas, that crest was a false one; there was a slight dip behind, then another rise, which constituted the real crest. As the men advanced over the sky line and exposed themselves to full view, the Boers suddenly stood up in their trenches and fired in quick succession the five rounds with which their Mausers were charged, at a range of 50 yards.

"The effect was too terrible to describe. That rush of men, confident and erect as a great wave nearing the shore, was checked in a moment. There was a stagger forward, and then all that remained was a line of poor, helpless human beings, struggling on the ground in agony. Some rose again, perhaps not knowing what they were doing and fell, pierced, in many instances, with a dozen bullets.

"Those who marvellously escaped the murderous discharge could only lie with the others, hoping to escape observation; the slightest movement of the arm or leg, whether it was the death struggle of a wounded man or the incautious attempt of one of the lucky ones to get better cover behind a rock, drew a shower of bullets, bringing certain death not only to the unfortunate man himself, but to many who lay around him. Stillness was the only hope of life.

"I will not anticipate the official returns, as the numbers killed and wounded have been differently stated, but I fear they are very bad. I know that out of a hundred men who charged with the two companies, sixty fell, and that if any escaped it was due only to the unevenness of the ground in certain spots.'

HORSES FOR BRITISH MOUNTS

English Agents Make a Contract at New York for 50,000 American Animals.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—An agent for the British Government will sign a contract this week for the delivery of 50,000 horses in South Africa by July 1. This is the current report in horse markets.

It is said that a firm of dealers will provide the animals and they are already preparing to collect the great number required. According to the rumors the horses are to be shipped directly from this port to Cape Town. It is said the average price for the horses will be about $100, which would make the total amount of the contract $5,000,000. The United States Government allows $150 each for the purchase of cavalry horses.

There is little doubt that the British Government is trying to buy horses in this country as it is all over Europe to meet the demands of the army in South Africa.

MAUD ADAMS' STATUE BARRED.

It Will Not Be Permitted in the Paris Exposition Grounds.

NEW YORK, April 9.—"The $150,000 gold statue of Maud Adams, the actress, typifying 'The American Girl,' will not be exhibited at the Paris Exposition," says A. H. Mattox, press representative of the United States Commission.

"Miss Adams' statue will not be admitted within the exposition gates," said Mr. Mattox, "on the ground that the exhibit is a personal one. Commissioner-General Peck was asked for space for the statue, but I am authorized to state that the only American statue to be shown will be that of Lafayette, the money for which was subscribed by the Government and by children of the public schools. Commissioner Peck has written from Paris most positively that he will not have the statue of Miss Adams at the exposition."

CRUISER ALBANY DELAYED.

British Shipyards Slow in Completing Her Fittings.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The naval authorities are exasperated over the delay in completing the cruiser Albany at the Armstrong Works, at Elswick, where her officers and crew have been for the last two weeks. The principal trouble has been due to the steam heating, which is something practically unknown to foreign warship builders, but which was made part of the contract for the Albany. Letters from officers on the ship received tell of the sufferings of the crew during a fortnight of British weather, when on the clearest day it was possible to see almost the length of the ship. The rest of the time it was raining and was always chilling to the bone. All the time an insufficient force of yardmen were hammering away in all parts of the vessel. The works employ 30,000 men, but the labor union regulations are so far-fetched that more work, it is said, could be accomplished in an American establishment with 10,000 men. The final delivery of the ship has been promised for April 10, and after going to coal at Southampton the Albany was to start across the ocean in the hope of reaching New York on April 27.

WOMAN'S LOVE FOUND A WAY.

Missouri Girl Obtains Pardon for Man Who Wronged Her.

WED IN GOVERNOR'S MANSION.

MISS MAUDE MALOTT'S DEVOTION TO GEORGE W. WILSON.

He Was Sent to Prison in 1899, and Since Then the Girl Has Spared No Effort to Set Him Free.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., April 9.—George W. Wilson, who was sent to the penitentiary from Clay County in June, 1899, under sentence of five years for enticing a female under lawful age from her home, was pardoned by Gov. Stephens this morning. Immediately after Wilson was taken out of the prison he was met by Miss Maude Malott, the girl he betrayed, and together they went to the executive mansion where they were married by Rev. W. G. Pike, chaplain of the prison, in the presence of Gov. and Mrs. Stephens.

Since Wilson came to the prison Miss Malott has been unceasing in her efforts to have him pardoned. She has haunted the Governor's office for months and finally procured a lengthy petition from citizens of Clay County asking that executive clemency be extended. Her father was obdurate, however, and protested against the pardon until a few days ago. Finally, the daughter won him over and a letter was received from him this morning saying that he withdrew his protest. This letter decided the matter, and when Miss Malott called at the Governor's office she found the pardon waiting for her and an invitation from Gov. and Mrs. Stephens for the marriage, to take place at the mansion. She was almost overcome with joy at the announcement, but hastened to the prison with the precious paper, and her lover was soon a free man.

This is the first time, so far as any one can remember, when such a wedding took place in the Executive Mansion.

Wilson is said to have borne a good reputation prior to coming to the prison. His bride belongs to a very respectable family of Clay County, and is rather pretty and attractive. Her persistent fight for her lover won the admiration of every one about the State House, and there was not a man in the building who did not feel happy when she won her gallant battle.

PLOT TO BLOW UP JAIL FOILED

Plan Arranged to Liberate Expert Safe Blowers Confined at Bridgeport, Conn.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 9.—Through the watchfulness of Capt. George McCloskey of the New York Detective Bureau a bold plot to blow up the jail in Bridgeport and liberate three expert safe-crackers was frustrated late Saturday night. Men armed with rifles and revolvers stood at every corner of the building, a posse of reserves were within call and telephone and telegraph wires were in readiness to aid in a coup.

About midnight four rough looking men sauntered up in front of the pail and surveyed the premises. A cough from one of the armed guards within the gate alarmed them. A moment's whispered consultation ensued among the quartet and before the officials could be notified the men staggered off, as if intoxicated, and disappeared in different directions.

Supt. Birmingham of the Bridgeport police was notified late Saturday afternoon that four men had left this city for Bridgeport and that there was good reason to believe they intended to blow up the north wing of the jail with nitro-glycerine and in the confusion effect the escape of three notorious burglars named Harry Ogden, alias "Connecticut Blackie," Jim Murphy, known in the rogues' gallery as "Big Murphy," and Dan Lashaway.

The superintendent warned Sheriff Hawley and deputies were posted inside and outside of the jail. Orders were given that nobody should be admitted within the main gate and everybody who approached the building was to be closely scrutinized.

A strict watch was set on the prisoners who were to be rescued and plans made to seize them at once if any untoward episode occurred. As it turned out, there was no jail delivery and beyond admitting that advices had been received of a plot to blow up a part of the jail the officials refuse to discuss the matter.

MRS. DEWEY QUITS ST. PAUL'S

She Will Hereafter Attend St. John's Episcopal Church With the Admiral.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The wife of Admiral Dewey has left the Catholic Church, which she joined a few years ago, and in which her marriage to the admiral was celebrated.

She will hereafter attend St. John's Episcopal Church, in which the admiral has for years had a pew.

The admiral declined to talk about the matter, except to admit that Mrs. Dewey had some weeks ago definitely given up her pew in St. Paul's Church.

The Dewey pew at St. John's was vacant throughout yesterday's service. Not even the admiral was there. This, however, was accidental, as it had been his intention to attend the 11 o'clock service, but he was kept so busy seeing callers, with several of whom he spent almost the entire morning in his study, that he did not get to church.

At the time of her marriage Mrs. Dewey, wishing to have the ceremony as quiet as possible, made the stipulation that no one should be present at the ceremony outside of her own party. As it turned out, there were two persons in attendance utterly unknown.

On this account there was considerable feeling. Not since her marriage has Mrs. Dewey attended St. Paul's or any other Catholic Church, so that her final leaving is not a complete surprise to her personal friends.

At the time of her conversion to the Roman Catholic faith Mrs. Dewey was a pewholder in St. John's. Mr. Jules Boeufve, chancellor of the French Embassy, at that time a member of St. Matthew's Church in this city, was largely instrumental in Mrs. Dewey's conversion, as in that of several other prominent society women about the same time.

RUTHLESS RAFFLING OF AN ACTOR'S TRUNK.

Richard 3d
HUMP
BOURBON

ACTOR LAWRENCE HANLEY AND HIS FORMER POSSESSIONS.

For it so falls out
That what we have we prize not to the worth
Whiles we enjoy it, but being lacked and lost,
Why, then we reck the value; then we find
The virtue that possession would not show us
While 'twas ours.

W. SHAKSPEARE.

Lawrence Hanley, who has played Shakespeare off and on, as the spirit moved him, for some years, may or may not have thought of these lines while his trunk was being raffled by a constable in Belleville Saturday.

The trunk reached Belleville in October, and it contained the wardrobe which Hanley would have worn in a "superb production of 'Hamlet'" had he not suddenly become busy elsewhere—to wit, at the Lindell Hotel, many miles from the Belleville opera house.

The manager and the company got together and decided that "Hamlet" without the ham would not be a howling success. Of course Mr. Hanley was indisposed. When a man is as seriously indisposed as he was that night he feels like answering an anxious theater manager's telegram with:

"Thou troublest me; I am not in the humor."

While Hanley remained at his hotel an angry mob was besieging the box office of the Opera House. It clamored for its money. Manager E. J. Stannus was forced to refund, and as he handed out the coin

"The big round tears
Coursed one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase."

That audience was not to be parleyed with. It had sat on the hard chairs in the Opera House for nearly two hours waiting to get a glimpse of Hamlet and hadn't even seen the ghost.

It reasoned:

"Why should a man whose blood is warm within Sit like his grandsire, cut in alabaster."

In vain did Mr. Stannus try to temporize. The more the crowd yelled the oftener he repeated:

"I thank you for your voices; thank you:
Your most sweet voices."

"Mr. Hanley," he said, "is ill. He failed to appear on that account and"—

"Then you and I and all of us fell down."

"But for his illness I am sure Mr. Hanley would be here."

At the close of Mr. Stannus' speech a man in the audience said:

"In my mind's eye, Horatio." This remark made

"A hit, a palpable hit.

Now, Mr. Stannus was out some coin expended in advertising the show. He seized Hanley's trunk and sent the actor a message which read in effect:

"Thyself and thy belongings are not thine own."

Up to this time Hanley had been inclined to take the matter philosophically, arguing:

"Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn?"

But when he learned that his trunk had been seized he realized that:

"If all the year were playing holidays
To sport would be as tedious as to work."

And so he bade the manager:

"Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice."

However he did not go to Belleville to claim his trunk. The audience was still living there.

Saturday morning the contents of the trunk were auctioned. That is, they were put up for sale, but Manager Stannus, who had expected a great rush to be made for the actor's effects, learned that:

"All things that are
Are with more spirit chased than enjoyed."

The trunk contained a sash that might be used with equal facility in "Richard III." or a St. Patrick's Day parade, a make-up outfit; three daggers one of which showed signs of having been used to open oysters; one pair of tights, Hamlet; one pair of ditto, Romeo; one pair of opera length leather boots suited either to Falstaff of a duck hunter; three towels and a sheet marked L Hotel; one rabbit's foot and a hoodoo charm labeled "bourbon whisky; and one Richard III. hump.

The whole lot brought $23.70, that amount being bid by Manager Stannus who says he will hold the trunk a reasonable time to give the actor a chance to redeem it.

Hanley has meanwhile announced:

"I'll purge and leave sack and live cleanly," and as, "He was ever precise in promise keeping," it may be that:

"All these woes shall serve
For sweet discourses in our time to come."

DEATH OF DR. A. L. SHORTRIDGE

He Was for Many Years a Prominent Citizen of Missouri.

TIPTON, Mo., April 9.—Dr. Alfred Lewis Shortridge, one of Tipton's prominent citizens, died here Sunday. He was born in Scott County, Ky., June 2, 1813. Coming to Callaway County, Mo., in 1833, he made the trip back and forth several times on horseback to Lexington, Ky., to attend Transylvania University, and graduated in medicine from there in 1836. He located in Portland, Mo., later removing to Boonville, Mo. In 1850 he went to California, returning later to Cooper County. He married Miss Mary Bradley December 31, 1861, in Syracuse, Mo. He moved to Kirkwood, Mo., in 1867, where he resided until 1877. While in Kirkwood he was interested in the White Car Fast Freight Line on the Missouri Pacific Railroad; also, in barrel works and a tobacco factory in St. Louis. He was one of the founders of the Cooper County Bank. He entered in 1847 the land upon which he lived until he retired and removed to this city in October, 1899

ROOSEVELT'S UNCLE.

Goes to Europe to See Croker and Talk Over the Political Situation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Robert B. Roosevelt, the Democratic uncle of Gov. Roosevelt, sailed for Europe Saturday. Mr. Roosevelt is a member of the Tammany Society and is on very good terms with Richard Croker. It is said that his chief purpose in going abroad at this time is to have a talk with the Tammany chief.

Mr. Roosevelt thinks the party has a good chance of winning the presidency and also of electing a Governor.

When he meets Mr. Croker he will tell him that the delegation from this State to the national convention should go to Kansas City unpledged. Mr. Croker will also be told that the candidacy of Admiral Dewey has changed the political situation and made it more interesting and doubtful. He took with him hundreds of clippings from newspapers.

Although personal friends of Mr. Roosevelt say he is in favor of the nomination of Augustus Van Wyck for President, he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter last Friday that he was for Dewey.

JUST BEFORE HIS WEDDING.

Capt. Louis Ostheim, First U. S. Artillery, Found Dead.

SHOT HIMSELF BY ACCIDENT.

HE WAS TO HAVE MARRIED MRS. EVA BRUCE WOOD.

Had Just Returned From the Philippines and Had Been Busy With the Preparations for His Marriage To-Day.

CHICAGO, April 9.—A verdict of death by an accidental wound was decided on to-day by the Coroner's jury in the case of Capt. Louis Ostheim of the First United States Artillery, who was found dead last night in his apartments at the Auditorium Annex. At first it was believed that the death of Capt. Ostheim was a premeditated suicide, but no motive has been found for such an act and after listening to considerable testimony the jury rendered its verdict. Capt. Ostheim was to have been married to-day to Mrs. Eva Bruce Wood and procured a license Saturday. Capt. Ostheim, it is said, had been in poor health since his return from the Philippines and had suffered considerably from insomnia.

Capt. Ostheim was found dead in his room at the Auditorium Annex last night. There was a bullet wound in his right temple. Under his body was a new revolver. The body lay on the side and life seemed to have been extinct since Saturday night.

According to announcements in the Chicago papers Capt. Louis Ostheim and Mrs. Eva Bruce Wood were to be married in this city to-day at the residence of the bride's uncle, Walter B. Phister. After the ceremony Capt. Ostheim and his bride were to leave immediately for the East, visiting Philadelphia, the Captain's former home, and other cities. After May 1 they were to be at home at Fort Screven, Savannah, Ga., where the Captain's battery is stationed.

Among the articles found in the Captain's room were two wedding rings. One was of heavy gold and inscribed: "Eva to Louis, April 9, 1900." The other was smaller and more delicately made. Inside was engraved: "Louis to Eva, April 9, 1900."

Capt. Ostheim was stationed at Fort Sheridan previous to the Spanish-American war, and it was during his stay here that he met Mrs. Wood. He had been transferred from service with the Sixth Artillery in Manila to the First in the United States, and had come to Chicago to be married.

Nothing was left in the room to throw any light on the affair. The only writing found was the following address on an empty envelope: "Miss Clara Ostheim, 1312 North Seventh street, Philadelphia." In the pockets of the Captain's clothing were found eight $50 bills, five $20 bills and a check for $210.

Capt. Ostheim registered at the Auditorium Annex on Monday, April 2, one week ago to-day. He seemed to be in excellent health, showed the tan of his Philippine campaigning in his face, and was was reserved in his manner.

Known in St. Louis.

Capt. Ostheim, during his Philippine service, was in the same regiment and battery that the late Lieut. F. A. Pearce was. It will be remembered that Lieut. Pearce killed himself while suffering from insanity brought on by sunstroke and severe wounds while on service in Iloilo last summer. Ostheim was then First Lieutenant of the same battery, G, while Pearce was Second Lieutenant. It is not known that Ostheim was suffering from the effects of service in that island.

Ostheim was well known in this city. He was a personal friend of Capt. Rumbold, and was often in camp with Battery A when Rumbold was its comandant, especially before the Spanish war. He spent a week with the battery at Lamar, in 1897, and was very popular with both officers and men.

BANKER TAKES HIS LIFE

Called Upon to Explain in Court How He had Handled a $600,000 Trust Fund.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 9.—Banker H. H. Pitcher, who has charge of the Livermore Bank, in the capacity of manager and cashier, blew his brains out at his Livermore home to-day.

Pitcher was a trustee of the estate of the late Thomas Varney, deceased, valued at $600,000. His trust was being investigated in court. Pitcher was to produce his books in court to-day and testify as to how he handled the bank and the trust. Rather than appear in court he blew his brains out. Pitcher did not leave any message.

WIFE AND WIDOW.

Judge Ferriss Decides There Is a Difference.

In the suit of Ormsby against the New England Insurance Co., Judge Ferris Monday rendered the following opinion:

"There is a distinction between 'wife' and 'widow.' Ormsby, by his application directed the company to issue policy to his 'wife,' but by mistake the company made it payable to his 'widow.' If the policy had been properly issued to the 'wife' she would have had at once a vested interest in the policy, which would not have been divested by a divorce and subsequent remarriage of the husband."

Sang to Prisoners.—At the city jail, Sunday, Miss Marguerite Terry sang for the prisoners, and other services appropriate to Palm Sunday were held.

DEWEY'S TRIP WEST

CHICAGO RECEPTION COMMITTEE CALLED ON HIM.

HIS ITINERARY COMPLETE.

He Asks That All Entertainments Be So Arranged That Mrs. Dewey Can Share in Them.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The Chicago Reception Committee, consisting of W. B. Conkey and J. M. Glenn, had a final interview with Admiral Dewey to-day. No mention was made of politics, the Admiral's only allusion to the matter being that since he had accepted the invitation to visit Chicago last October, conditions had so changed that he was acepting no further invitations. He assured the committee that he was glad to accept the hospitality of the city of Chicago. He told the committee he had received invitations from various organizations there to become their guests, but had not accepted them. He had placed himself solely in the hands of the city of Chicago.

He requested that there be no separate entertainments for himself and Mrs. Dewey. He wished matters so arranged that she could attend the functions at which he would be present. The Admiral, who received the committee in a most cordial manner, was assured that his wishes in this respect would be carried out and also was informed that arrangements had been made to have his son, who is now a resident of Chicago, participate in the various entertainments.

The Admiral's party, consisting of himself and Mrs. Dewey, Lieut. Caldwell, Mr. Maddy of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, a Chinese servant and Mrs. Dewey's maid will leave this city in a special train over the Baltimore & Ohio on April 29, in time to reach Chicago and rest before the ball at the Auditorium on the night of the 30th, the eve of the second anniversary of Manila Bay.

The train will be one of the handsomest ever run over the Baltimore & Ohio tracks. Admiral and Mrs. Dewey will occupy President Cowen's private car. No stops will be made between Washington and Chicago, as the Admiral does not wish the trip to have the appearance of a stumping tour.

After leaving Chicago, however, the party will take a twelve days tour through the Mississippi Valley. So far as outlined, this will include a stop of one day at Jacksonville, Ill., two days in St. Louis, two in Memphis, two in Louisville, two in Nashville and one in Frankfort.

PREPARING TO LIGHT STREETS.

City Notified That Kern Company Will Install Lamps Soon.

A. J. O'Reilly, supervisor of city lighting, received a letter from the Kern Incandescent Lighting Co. of New York Monday stating that a representative of the company would arrive in St. Louis in a few days to arrange for the lighting of the street west of Jefferson avenue, in conformity with the contract which was recently awarded them.

A sample of the lamps to be used was sent to Mr. O'Reilly for inspection. The lamp is arranged for gasoline, but the tank being removable the lamp will be available for the use of gas.

BAD TASTE IN HIS MOUTH.

That Is the Effect of Grandjury Report on Mayor Ziegenhein.

Mayor Ziegenhein has not yet filed charges against Supply Commissioner Meier, whose official affairs were the subject of a caustic report by the recent grandjury.

His Honor is in no hurry about the matter, and he stated to the Post-Dispatch Monday that he needed more time to deliberate before taking formal action.

The subject, he says, leaves a bad taste in his mouth, and he prefers not to discuss it for publication. Just now he would sonner talk about that grand "banquet" held at the Planters' Hotel Saturday night, at which he said the supporters of his administration were present in large numbers.

SIDENER HAS DIPTHERIA.

Taken Ill at the Merchants' League Club Banquet and Escorted Home.

Judge George B. Sidener of the First District Police Court is confined to his home with diphtheria.

The Judge was taken ill at the Merchants' League Club banquet Saturday night and was taken home. A physician was called and it was ascertained that he was suffering from diphtheria. Judge Sidener contracted a severe cold several days ago, and it would not yield to treatment. Judge Boettger is acting in his stead.

THE CLAY FELL ON HIM

John Bradley's Jaw Was Fractured and His Face Lacerated.

John Bradley, a teamster, residing at 2128 Gravois avenue, met with probably fatal injuries Monday morning in an excavation at Main street and Washington avenue. He was driving a team attached to a wagon which was hauling loads of clay out of the excavation. While going up the incline leading to the street, the wagon upset, both horses as well as the load of clay falling on Bradley.

He sustained a compound fracture of the jaw and his face was badly lacerated. He was also injured internally. While being treated at the Dispensary by Dr. Vogel, he had a hemorrhage of the lungs. Bradley was sent to the Baptist Hospital. It is said that he was a marshal in the St. Patrick's Day parade.

FELL DOWN A SHAFT.

Anthony Caspar's Spine and Shoulder Were Injured.

Anthony Casper, 22 years of age, residing at 1700 South Twelfth street, met with a serious accident Monday morning at the plant of the Stephens Lithographing and Engraving Co. at Second and Vine streets.

He was employed on the second floor of the establishment. In the course of his duties Monday morning he went to the elevator shaft and looked up to see where the car was. In so doing he lost his balance and fell to the bottom of the shaft, a distance of 30 feet. His spine was injured and his shoulder dislocated. Dr. Vogel gave the injured boy temporary relief at the City Dispensary and forwarded him to the City Hospital.

DAVIS IN ABOUT TWO WEEKS.

Administration's Bad Boy Has Promised to Speak in St. Louis.

Webster Davis, former Assistant Secretary of the Interior, who resigned his office to champion the cause of the Boers, has accepted an invitation extended by Dr. Preetorius and other St. Louis Boer sympathizers to deliver a lecture in St. Louis.

In his letter of acceptance, Mr. Davis says he already has engagements that will keep him in the East two weeks, but that he will come to St. Louis as soon as they are filed.

THE EVIDENCE COMES.

From All Parts of the City and From All Kinds of People.

Testimony Is Daily Gathered in Behalf of Morrow's Kid-ne-oids and Liverlax.

No preparation ever placed before the people of St. Louis has gained such a high reputation as Morrow's Kid-ne-oids and Liverlax. The statements of St. Louis people about these medicines are remarkable.

Geo. King, cigar manufacturer, who resides at No. 1106 Jule street, St. Joseph, has used these medicines with remarkable results, and speaks as follows: "I have been afflicted with liver complaint for a long time; I am naturally of a bilious temperament. I had malaria in my system and was bilious much of the time. I have taken liver pills and other liver remedies, but nothing relieved me until I commenced to take Morrow's Liverlax. I felt much better after taking the first dose and continued to take it until that tired, languid feeling left me, and I am full of animation and as lively and vigorous as ever. Malaria has been driven out of my system, and my liver seems to perform its functions. Liverlax is splendid.

"I took a few doses of Morrow's Kid-ne-oids for their tonic effect, and I am so well pleased with the result that I will continue to use them right along. I will heartily recommend Morrow's Kid-ne-oids and Morrow's Liverlax."

Kid-ne-oids are not pills, but Yellow Tablets, which is a scientific form of preparation. Liverlax are small, red pellets, which cure constipation and sell for twenty-five cents a box. Kid-ne-oids sell for fifty cents a box. Both of these remedies are for sale at all drug stores.

About Gas Ranges.

Ordinary stove polishes make "something frightful" of the gas range. Dirt and grease mix with the polish and when it burns off the odor is stifling.

AUSTIN'S MISFORTUNE.

The awful disaster which has overtaken Austin, Tex., and adjacent country will excite an interest and sympathy not less than was aroused by the great Johnstown flood a few years ago.

Austin has lost her magnificent dam, one of the greatest engineering works in the country, the city electric light and power houses, besides more than 100 houses swept away in the flood. How many lives are lost is hard to say—probably not less than 50.

But perhaps the worst feature of the situation is that the suffering will be prolonged. Austin is without light, water and power. The actual loss of $2,000,000 will be swelled indefinitely by the almost complete stoppage of business. And the consequent distress among the poor will be very great.

The people of Austin made theirs a great city by energy and the intelligent view of what a municipality should do. The reservoir, dam and power house were public works of which any city might well be proud. That Austin will soon rise again from the desolation and restore her power and beauty is the earnest wish of every citizen of St. Louis and Missouri.

With Kansas City so quickly replacing a vast auditorium for a great national convention, there is evidently sufficient public spirit in Missouri. The same promptness and energy shown in Kansas City should be made apparent in St. Louis in the preparations for the greatest World's Fair ever seen. The date is far ahead, but the exhibition is to be extraordinary and there will not be a day to spare if it is to be all that it can be made.

A DISTINGUISHED WOMAN.

Mrs. Robert G. Miller of Fostoria, O., is distinguished as the first woman repeater.

On election day Mrs. Miller's husband was candidate for the Board of Education. Mrs. Miller got out and hustled for him. She rounded up a "block" of five or ten women and voted them in the Fifth Ward, and slipped in her own ballot along with theirs. Then she returned to her own precinct in the First Ward and cast a ballot there.

A little later in the day it occurred to her that this was wrong. O, dear! So she returned to the Fifth Ward polling place and tried to have the ballot canceled. But as she had been passed by the judges there was some difficulty, and the matter isn't settled yet.

The fable teaches that women haven't the courage of their political instincts. Their deviltry is not robust and confident. No male repeater would say "O, dear!" and own up.

WHY THE DELAY?

The filtration ordinance passed the Council in response to a public demand which was renewed in unmistakable terms before the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Delegates.

This is not a debatable question. Every citizen wants pure water. The only way to obtain pure water is to provide a suitable filtration plant, and this can be obtained only through a series of experiments such as are contemplated in the ordinance.

If the House obstructs or defeats the public will so clearly made known it is because the delegates are not zealous to serve the public interests. They have other fish to fry.

WAR CHAMPION'S PLEA.

Col. James G. C. Lea, Assistant Quartermaster-General, United States Army, says "War is work, hardship, healthful growth; peace is ease, luxury, disease."

In thus denouncing peace as a condition of ease, luxury and disease, the man of war blindly ignores the great industrial world with its triumphs over nature and turns his attention solely to that limited circle known as "Society," which alone may be said to become debased by long continued peace.

Are the clearing of forests, the building of railroads, the drainage of swamps, the cultivation of the soil, the work of invention, the hum of the factory, the spanning of rivers, the digging of tunnels, the writing of books, the painting of pictures signs of "ease, luxury, disease?"

Have the great captains of industry, the great inventors, the scientists, the authors and artists been men of ease? Is their work the outcome of a diseased condition? Are the millions who live by useful labor victims of ease and luxury? Is it necessary, in order to further stimulate them, to set them to killing and wounding each other?

Is it not a fact that the steam engine, the electric motor, the agricultural machine, the knowledge of scientific farming, the triumph of the miner and the scientist have all been products of peaceful days? Is there no strenuous state of life but that of the fighter?

To reduce the argument for war to an absurdity, it is only necessary to apply it to individuals or families. Do these find the atmosphere of quarrel and feud productive of progress and prosperity?

It is well for the soldier to be contented with his lot. But reason and experience are with the advocates of peace and not with him. The best he can do is to do his unpleasant duty when ordered and keep silence.

St. Louis has been a pudding for boodlers and bribers. That is why the city funds are short. Had the money paid into the city treasury every year been properly used, and had no franchises been given away, what a city we might now have to show our hosts of visitors! Until the leaks are stopped we shall continue to suffer for lack of means to carry on the municipal government even in a crude way.

PUBLICITY AS A MOTIVE POWER.

Judge Duffie of the Hot Springs Circuit Court has announced from the bench that he will personally strive to have the Legislature enact laws for the suppression of gambling at that great resort.

This remarkable manifestation of judicial indignation was provoked by a report of the grandjury to the effect that there was a great deal of gambling going on which they could not suppress owing to official connivance.

The prevalence of gambling and the conditions under which it flourished in Hot Springs were brought out by the Post-Dispatch. The people of that town were in blissful ignorance of all the violations of law mentioned by Judge Duffie until they got the news in these columns.

Publicity is invaluable to a community. A strong newspaper, even though published hundreds of miles away can tell the people of any town or city many things that it is good for them to know. The Hot Springs people were aroused to the realization of disgraceful conditions there by the Post-Dispatch's publications and there is now a lively hope of the purification of the atmosphere.

A BIG ELECTRIC TRUST.

The absorption of the Siemens-Holske Electric Company of America by the General Electric is said to foreshadow a trust which shall cover the world.

The Siemens-Holske is the leading electric interest in Europe, and in this country controls the Widener-Elkins and Whitney syndicates. The new trust will therefore control all the principal electric vehicle companies of this country and related industries, it being understood that a consolidation of the largest electrical companies and an alliance with the General Electric will soon be effective.

THE GREAT RUBY,

BY ROSE COGHLAN,

Famous on the American Stage as a Player of Many Parts in Great Productions.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

The Duke of St. Edmunds owns a ruby which is intrusted to Sir John Garnett, a London jeweler, to sell for £50,000. On the day of sale it is stolen, through a clever ruse, by a gang of diamond thieves, among whom are a woman known as Countess Charkoff and a man calling himself Col. Colville. Lady Garnett is a vain woman, who, in trying to be aristocratic, spends her husband's money lavishly and is the dupe of the thieves. The ruby is hidden in a box of chocolates which Countess Charkoff has.

Continuation of Chapter Two.

"My first step will be to search the guests' rooms while they are at dinner to-night."

"Very good. Come with me. I'll get you the pass keys. But be sure none of them catch you at it. It'd be ruin for the house."

"Don't let that worry you," laughed Brett as he followed the manager and Louisa to an inner room.

They had barely disappeared when a woman glided from behind a half-open door at the other end of the office.

It was the Countess, who had just left Longman.

"A detective to search the rooms!" she gasped. "Lucky I overheard! But what shall I do with the ruby?"

She eyed the chocolate box in despair.

"Hello, Countess!" exclaimed a hearty voice. "Here's a nice joke on me!"

Lady Garnett came in, carrying a little steel safe.

"See what John has sent me to keep my jewelry in," she laughted. "It's burglar-proof, bombproof and a lot of other things and opens with a password. He's resolved I shan't lose any more jewels, I suppose."

HER EYES WERE FIXED AND STARING.

As she spoke she was working on the combination. The word spelled out, the safe door swung open.

"Nice sort of thing to lug around, isn't it?" she grumbled.

"It's secure, anyway," answered the Countess. "By the way, what a place that would be to hide my precious chocolates from that greedy chambermaid!"

Suiting the action to the word she tossed the candy box into the open safe and slammed the door shut.

"Don't look so surprised, dear," she cried gayly, in response to Lady Garnett's air of bewilderment. "It's just one of my jokes. You'll guard my treasure, won't you?"

"Yes, certainly. That's all right. I don't believe the safe was built for chocolates, but no one can steal them from there. I only wish the Great Ruby was as safe. I'll carry it to my room now and dress for dinner."

"The detectives won't look there for the Ruby, anyway," soliloquized the Countess.

* * * * * * *

Dinner was over and the Oatlands Park Hotel guests were gathered in the lounging room.

Prince Kassim was speaking to the Countess and several others of an official letter he had just received from the English Government.

"They complain I'm spending too much money," he was saying, "and they are going to send me back home to govern my own native State. After bringing me up and educating me like an English gentleman, they complain because I spend money like one. And now I'm to run home in disgrace."

"I'm so sorry," murmured the Countess.

"India will be heaven, Mirtza, if you'll go there with me," whispered the Prince, as the others moved away.

"Hush! You mustn't speak so. You would tire of me in a year. Wait a moment. There's Lady Garnett's maid. I must speak to her."

Calling the maid to her she went on:

"Poor Lady Garnett has gone to her room with a bad headache, I understand. Ask her if she will kindly send me my box of chocolates from her safe."

The maid returned a moment later with the news that "Lady Garnett had gone to bed and would send the box of chocolates to the Countess in the morning."

"Worried over the theft of the Great Ruby, I suppose," commented the Countess.

"What did I tell you, Mirtza?" said the Prince. "Trouble always follows in that jewel's track. Its possessor is under a curse. You are coming to Lord's Cricket Grounds to-morrow? I play on the Cambridge team. I want you to see me, for it may be my last game before I go home."

"Home?"

"India would indeed be home if you would only go with me, Mirtza. You should rule my province as queen."

"Until you wearied of me."

"Still harping on that absurd fancy? Why are you so cold toward me?"

"I am not. Im only wise. I can see nto the future. Do you think it is easy for me to refuse you?"

A different sort of love scene was at the other end of the room, where Brenda Elsmere sat with Capt. Dalrymple. The girl had for the moment eluded her mother's watchful eye and Lord George Hartopp's silly attentions and Dalrymple had taken advantage of the fact.

"Brenda," he was saying, "do you see that Japanese cabinet. Go to it the first thing in the morning. You will find there a message from me."

"Shan't you be here in the morning?"

"Yes, but I may not see you alone before I go up to London. You see I must go to the War Office to-morrow to report on some patents in connection with my balloon. The balloon camp is at Hampstead Heath and in a day or two the authorities are going there to inspect a patent lever I've invented."

"Isn't the balloon work you do very dangerous?"

"One must always risk something."

"Even the happiness of those who love us?"

"I would risk my soul to know you love me, Brenda."

"Can you doubt it, dear?"

"Here comes Mrs. Elsmere. Good night. You won't forget to look in the Japanese cabinet?"

The room gradually thinned out.

Dalrymple, before leaving it, went over to the Japanese cabinet and laid in it a note and a rose.

"If your answer is 'Yes' wear this to-morrow," the note read.

Then Dalrymple went off to bed to dream of the girl he loved. In his wildest dreams though he could never imagine the results of his sentimental note.

A pair of sharp eyes watched him from the room.

Then Brett, left alone, strode across to the cabinet and glanced at its contents.

"O!" he muttered. "A lovers' postoffice. Now, then, for a night of watching."

He lowered the lights and sat down in an easy chair.

The hours rolled slowly by. Brett was tired. His head began to nod. At last he fell sound asleep.

So heavy was his slumber that he failed to hear the stealthy opening of a bedroom door or the shuffle of feet along the balcony that led to the lounging room.

A light glimmered along the balcony and a white-robed figure appeared at the head of the stairs.

Lady Garnett, clad in a nightgown, her hair down her back, picked her way carefully down the steps. In one hand she held a diamond bracelet; in the other the Countess' chocolate box.

Her eyes were fixed and staring. Her lips moved vaguely.

Down into the room she came.

"The river is deep," she murmured brokenly. "It will guard its secret well."

She tossed the chocolate box into a chair.

"The river will guard its secret," she repeated.

She wandered across to the Japanese cabinet and opened it.

"This place is safe," she whispered. "Its doors are iron and double locked. No thief can burst them. What is this?"

She took out the red rose and tossed it on the floor. "More dead men's hair," she murmured. "It has no place here. The Great Ruby will be safe in this strong box."

She laid the diamond bracelet on Dalrymple's note, closed the cabinet door softly and started back toward her room, feeling her way.

One of her outstretched hands fell on Brett's face. He awoke with a start.

"Poor John," she said softly. "Poor dear old husband. He's sound asleep. Good night, dear one."

Stooping over, she kissed the astounded Brett on the lips.

"Good night!" she repeated, and crept slowly back to her room.

"Lady Garnett!" gasped Brett, in wide-eyed amazement. "Great Heaven! She is walking in her sleep."

RUSKIN'S LITERARY EARNINGS.

Not many authors have had a larger income from their books. For the past 13 years his copyrights brought him an average of £4000 a year. They must continue a valuable property, though the earlier writings will soon be released from copyright. A careful estimate shows that Ruskin's best selling book has been "Sesame and Lilies." After it would come "A Crown of Wild Olive," "The Seven Lamps of Architecture" and "Unto This Last."

CAPT. LEARY'S WAIL.

In which the reader is given an opportunity to pronounce the name of the Island of Guam as he may please.

I'm Capt. Richard Leary,
The Governor of Guam.
These plotters make me weary
Who talk to Uncle Sam,
And try to do me injury; who say I am a clam,
And seek to have me ousted from the island where I am.
Oh, how can I be cheery,
Contented, gay or calm,
When they are knocking Leary,
The Governor of Guam?

I gave the natives freedom;
Reforms I instituted,
(And goodness knows they need 'em!)
To their condition suited.
I made 'em court and marry; I abolished slavery,
And yet that band of knockers have got it in for me.
No wonder I am skeery,
And vent a frequent damn,
Since I am Capt. Leary,
The Governor of Guam!

Sincere repentance makes no terms. The drowning man is rarely over-nice about the quality of his straw.

The married man must carry a double load. He has to do both what his wife will and what she won't.

There is room at the top, but very little else. You must carry your furniture with you.

Ignorance is much more often excusable than its plea.

Optimism is the child of hardship. The man at ease about his hearthstone raises many a querulous plaint against the blast that rudely tries his door, while outside, along the muddy road, the booted wayfarer lifts, above the howl of the storm, the cheery song of his unconquered heart.

In Defense of Coursing.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

It has become quite fashionable to speak of our forefathers as barbarians, brutes, etc., and to dismiss the subject with the statement that they are out of date, and, after all, knew nothing anyway.

Abusive language and invective are the weapons of bigots and of those who have no argument to submit to sustain their misrepresentations of facts. They can see no good except in their own narrow-minded ideas, set themselves up as moral censors, and those who may differ from them are moral degenerates.

Patrons of coursing fail to see the packs of hounds yelping after the "inoffensive, harmless little hares," because they do not go in packs, nor do they bark, nor growl nor snarl. The jack rabbits which are used for coursing purposes (not the little cotton-tails) are scientifically classed as rodents. Where they best thrive they are poisoned and hunted down in order that crops may be saved from their ravages.

Coursing is patronized by a respectable element of the great middle class. As one evidence of the character of persons who enjoy the sport it may be stated that it is in a very prosperous condition without the aid of the gambling class so essential to the financial success of many pastimes.

I would prefer the society of a lover of the magnificent greyhound to that of a champion of a rodent. The latter should organize a society for the prevention of cruelty to bed bugs, roaches, rats, etc.

How Easter Is Fixed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your articles in the Sunday issue concerning Easter the writer of the anonymous article makes a mistake, common to nearly all people, in stating that the rule for the determination of Easter is that it shall fall on the first Sunday after the full moon, which happens on or next after March 21, he quoting from the Book of Common Prayer, the denomination using that book not being stated. One writer in the Encyclopedia Britannica commits the same error, whilst another writer in the same publication gives the correct rule, as stated in both the International and Century dictionaries.

This rule is that Easter shall fall upon the Sunday next succeeding the 14th day of the calendar moon, which 14th day falls upon or subsequent to the 21st of March. According to this rule the observance of Easter is not governed by the full moon at all, but it depends upon the date of the new moon. The determination of the calendar moon is not given in the Encyclopedia Britannica. The present moon, or new moon, began on Friday, March 30, in both England and the United States, so that Easter Sunday falls on the 17th day of the moon, according to the manner of reckoning the civil day, as beginning at midnight. This gives plenty of time for the observance of Easter on next Sunday the world over, even though the calendar moon should be two days behind the actual moon.

The true rule for the determination of Easter, as given in the above, will sometimes cause Easter to be celebrated before full moon, as in England this year the moon does not full until one hour after Easter begins. However, in the United States the moon fulls on Saturday evening, so that in the United States this year the celebration of Easter comes in accord with the mistaken idea concerning the observance of the festival. Respectfully,

East St. Louis. C. T. KENNEY.

Kansas City and St. Louis.

From the Kansas City Star.

Every city has a greater friendship for one city than another. For years Kansas City lavihsed its affections upon Chicago. But, now that it is a big town itself, and the former object of its attachment has shown a disposition to maul its admirer, Kansas City naturally turns away and extends its valuable and powerful friendship to St. Louis. Hence there is general and hearty gratification in Kansas City over the friendly and encouraging disposition of the people of St. Louis at this time. Indeed, the people of Kansas City feel that the day is near at hand when the two dominant Missouri cities—one on each side of the State—shall stand together on public propositions and help each other.

Kansas City appreciates the hearty sympathy which St. Louis has extended to it in connection with the great loss it has suffered in the destruction of Convention Hall. The attitude of the St. Louis newspapers has been thoroughly decent and has inspired genuine gratitude in this community. There is no reason why these two towns should not be the best of friends. They are able not only to do each other a vast deal of good, but many of the annoyances which each suffers through the government at Jefferson City could be obviated if they would act together.

That this would be an advantage to the whole State goes without saying, notwithstanding the prejudice of the rural representatives against the cities.

PA'S RULE FOR PEOPLE WHO LOOK THROUGH HOUSES

"Now they are one thing about it," paw Told maw, after we New he had to moove; "Ennybuddy that wants to Look at This house hast to Get a Card from the Owner. They are no Sense in Lettin every hoodlum That comes along tramp over our carpets and look in the Clozets to see if we are neat when they Don't want to rent enny way."

The next Day they were about Forty peeple came to Look at the place, but maw Told most of them they couldn't come in if They didn't have the Pass word. One woman with a nextra chin that wouldn't stay back out of site sed she thot it was a mean trick to make her come so far and then not have a chance to Look at Things.

"I can't help that," maw told her. "I've made a rule and I won't brake it. I don't want peeple tramping thru the house that new they wouldn't rent it before they came in."

The woman told maw she was no Lady and went away. When paw came home maw told Him about it, and he said:

"That's the way to Treat such people. Make a rule and stick to it. If you let one Thru without a Card you got to Let them all come in. I'm glad you new enuff to Take my advice once in Your life. Now you see what a lot of trubble it Saves you. If I——"

About that time the Door bell rung and paw peeked Out the frunt windo and saw a Bewtifle Lady with stylish close on. When the girl opened the Door the Lady sed she Came to Look thru the house. Then maw rushed out and ast if she had a card. She didn't, and maw sed:

"Well, we can't sho it this Late in the Afternoon. You must come around Some other time, and have a card from the Agunt."

Before the laday turned to Go paw went out and sed to maw:

"O, I Gess we mite as well sho this Lady thru. Come rite in, please."

So he ran around With her and opened all the clozzets and whenever she smiled at paw he smiled at Her, and when he found Little albert's undershirt hanging on the Bathroom door nob he jerked it away quick and tride to Stick it in his Hip pocket, but Only got one Sleave tucked in so the rest of it Hung down behind him. Every time he would turn around to tell her sumthing after that she would smile more than Ever, and paw he smiled as sweet as He could too, and Before she got all around she Laft out loud and sed she didn't care to See enny more. Paw bowed as plesunt as he could when She left, and she turned and smiled at Him again After she Got down the Steps.

"There's a Lady," paw says when she was Gone. 'She knows how to Behave when she meets a——"

Then maw took a Hold of one end of the shurt and puled it around so paw could see, and after that he Couldn't seem to Get interested in ennything maw wanted to Talk about, but had sollum thots, and sed:

"Yit sum people say childrun are a Blessin."

The next afternoon paw Got off and me and him and maw Went to Hunt houses. Every time they wouldn't Let us in to See one paw and maw Got offle angry and sed some peeple had no more sense of politeness than Giney pigs. After while we saw a place that paw sed Looked just like the Thing from the Outside. Then he rung the bell, and after while the woman with the extry chin that had Been to Our house the Day before came to the door. Maw didn't go up on the Portch when she seen who it Was. Paw ast if he Could Look thru the house, and the woman sed:

"Have you a Card from the agent?"

"No," paw told her, "but we've Came a Long ways and this is the Only time I can see it."

"Oh, that's to Bad," she says, "but I have a rule I can't brake. How menny houses that you new you Didn't want Have you Trampt thru to-day?"

Paw straitened himself up and told her he Didn't beleave she was ust to Talking to peeple with Fine feelings. Then they was a man with a voice that sounded like when the Train goes over a bridge hollered out:

"What's the matter there, muther?"

I cot up with paw around the next corner and told him she was the woman that was at Our house the Day before, and sassed maw for not Letting her in.

When maw got there he sed:

"It would be a noffle good Thing for sum wimmen that are Always afrade they mite let sumbuddy thru the House without a card if they Would reem membur that the right Shoo never feis good on the left Foot." GEORGIE.

ST. LOUIS' COMING "CIRCUS."

Champ Clark Tells How Prof. T. Berry Smith Anticipates the World's Fair's Glories.

The best non-political thing bruited in Congress now, says Congressman Champ Clark, is the World's Exposition at St. Louis in 1903 to celebrate the centennial of the Louisiana purchase, the greatest achievement of finance and statesmanship ever performed by any one man. My friend Prof. T. Berry Smith of Central College, Missouri, has set forth his views of the great exposition in the following verses:

IN DE CITY OB ST. LOUIS IN 1903.

Ole 'oman, listen to me—now de chillun's all in bed—
Jess listen whiles I tells yo' what I heah de parson said,
What he tole us at de meetin' ob de 'ficial board to-night,
For the parson reads de papers while he ten's de gospel light,
Dar's gwine to be a circus—dat egzac'ly ain't de name
What de parson tole de brethren, but it means about the same—
Dar's gwine to be a circus, an he say it's gwine to be
In the city ob St. Louis in 1903.

'Twill be de bigges' circus dat de worl' has eber had,
And it's gwine to be a circus whar dar won't be nothin' bad;
De pasture an his people widout breakin' ob de rules
Kin go to see de circus as well as the animules.
All sexes ob religion—de gentile an' de Jew,
De Baptis', an' de Methodis', an' de 'Piscopalians, too—
All sexes ob religion, he say, was gwine to see
De circus in St. Louis in 1903.

Dar's gwine to be percessions, an' de ban's am gwine to play,
An' de tents will cubber acres—dat's what de parson say—
An' when yo' gits yo' ticket—'twill cos' yo' fifty cents—
Dey'll let yo' in for nothin' to go through all dem tents.
Dar'll be jess scads of goobers an' de pinkes' lemonade,
Dar'll be fried pies an' do'nuts, de bestes' ever made,
An' dey'll let yo' in at mornin' to stay all day an' see
Dat circus in St. Louis in 1903.

Ole 'oman, yo' ought to bin dar to heard him 'spaciate
About his country's glory, on providence an' fate;
He say de Lord was in it when Jeff'son took de chance
To purchase Loozzannie from Bonypart ob France,
An' dat de Lord intended from far creation's birth
To manifest his glory to all de tribes ob yearth
In de Miss'ssippi Valley—de time an' place to be
In de city ob St. Louis in 1903.

To help de Lord to show us de glory dat awaits
De parson say de Congress ob these United States
Would gib five million dollahs to help de cause along,
An' den, de whiles de choir was singin' ob a song,
De States and carpyrations would march up to de table
An' plank de'se money down as much as de' is able;
No doubt at all about it—dat circus gwine to be
In de city of St. Louis in 1903.

Ole o'man, we mus' see it, we sho'ly can't afford
To miss dis chance ob seein' de glory ob de Lord;
Although we's bin good Methodis', we might backslide and fall
An' not git into heaven to see de Lord at all.
So we mus' take de chances dis side de pearly gates—
De parson say de railroads will gib excursion rates—
An' yo' an' me, ole 'oman, mus' sho'ly go to see
Dat circus in St. Louis in 1903.

DUTIES OF "BEST MAN."

Would you kindly inform me what are the duties of the best man and how he shall act during the wedding ceremony? B. C.

The best man takes entire charge of the bridegroom on the day of the wedding. It is his place to see that the nervous benedict is dressed and at the church (or wherever the ceremony is to take place) on time. He accompanies the bridegroom to the altar and stands at his right during the reading of the service, handing him the ring at the proper moment. He also sees that the bridegroom's belongings are packed for the wedding journey and that the officiating clergyman receives his fee.

SPORTS OF THE DAY

HOOSIERS WERE EASY,

TEBEAU'S PENNANT WINNERS HAVE NO TROUBLE WINNING.

PAT DILLARD'S FINE SHOWING.

He Covered Third Base in Very Fine Style and Led All the Rest in Hitting.

Patsy Tebeau's pennant winners had a picnic with the Indianapolis Club of the American League at League Park Sunday afternoon.

The minors were never in the argument, but despite their lack of practice they played a fair quality of ball.

The locals hit their pitchers with the exception of "Willie" Dammann, at will, and made a total of 17 safe hits.

On the other hand, Willie Sudhoff and Jack Harper, who did the pitching for the Pennant Winners, completely mystified their opponents with the varied assortments of curves and speed they dished up for their delectation.

Sudhoff twirled the first four innings, and was hit safely three times during the interval, one of the hits being a three-bagger, which Heidrick badly misjudged, something that Emmett rarely does.

Harper finished the game, and was very effective up to the last inning, when he was hit safely four times. That, with a base on balls, a wild pitch and an error by Burkett, gave the Hoosiers three runs.

The bright, particular star of the game was Pat Dillard, St. Louis' great utility infielder. The ex-Detroiter played the third bag and accepted all the chances that came his way, two of them being very difficult ones. At the bat he was a terror to the opposing pitchers. Out of five times up he secured three singles and a slashing three-bagger.

Patsy Donovan, next to Dillard, was the best at the bat. He lined out three singles. Criger secured a pair of doubles, McGann a single and a double, Harper two singles and Burkett a triple. The final score was St. Louis 14, Indianapolis 4.

Hartsell, Indianapolis' diminutive left fielder, made a circus catch of Heidrick's long drive in the first inning. The ball was sent between the left and center fields and both fielders started after it at the crack of the bat. Hartsell reached the sphere first and grabbed it while on the run, and then tripped over the foot of Seybold, the center fielder. He turned almost a complete somersault, but jumped to his feet immediately with the ball in his hand and was vociferously applauded for the effort.

Joe Quinn played six innings of Sunday's game at second base. He secured a double and a single out of three times at bat. He had but one chance in the fielding line which he accepted. Joe's left optic is still badly discolored from the contact with that foul tip last week.

JEFFRIES AND FITZ.

It Looks Now as Though They Would Meet Again.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Once again a new complexion has been put on the pugilistic muddle in Greater New York, and even the wisest critics now admit that they are unable to solve the tangle. Champion Jeffries has practically agreed to meet Bob Fitzsimmons again. Jeffries arrived in town Saturday, and a meeting with Fitzsimmons to arrange the articles will be held early this week.

Fitzsimmons has turned around completely in his defiant policy toward what he called the "pugilistic trust," and is now willing to talk fight with Billy Brady, the recognized head of the fight syndicate.

No articles have been signed nor money posted, but well-founded report has it that all necessary details will be attended to as soon as Brady, manager of the champion, returns from Detroit.

This is a match that the sporting public has long wished for. Many a man has a deep-seated conviction that the Australian will win the next time. He claims he was dosed in their last fight and that most of the time he was out of his head. There has always been the utmost good feeling between the two men.

The statement made by Jeffries in Chicago last Sunday doubtless paved the way for the return match. Then he declared that Fitzsimmons was the hardest man in the world to whip and that the big fellows dodged him because they were afraid of him. This pleased Bob very much.

"Where will the big fights be held?" is the question every one is asking.

"DAGMAR" GREAT DANE OWNED BY EMILE HELFENSTELLER

WITH THE BOXERS.

The McGovern and White the Next Contest of Importance.

The next important boxing contest will be that between Tommy White of Chicago and Terry McGovern.

They meet at Tattersalls, in Chicago, on the night of Tuesday, April 17.

White was for a long while the dandy of all the fighters in his class. In all his battles he has been floored but six times, generally getting up to go on to victory. He has never been knocked out. He has whipped Dick Green, Henry Lyons, Young Dempsey, Kid Ryan, Danny McBride, Jack Lewis, Jack O'Brien, Eddie Santry, Johnny Van Heest, George Siddons, Billy Brennan and other good ones. He drew twice with Dixon, with Ike Weir, Griffo, Art Simms, Solly Smith and "Spike" Sullivan.

This Monday afternoon Gus Ruhlin will become Jim Corbett's trainer and will join the New Yorker at Lakewood. Ruhlin will remain with Corbett until the latter's match with Jeffries on May 11 is settled. After that Gus will begin his own work for his fight with Fitzsimmons, in the first 10 days of June. Ruhlin is looking very well. He carries a dark mark under the left eye as the only reminder of his battle with "Yank" Kenny.

Ruhlin does not drink, and is always in good shape. He has an appetite ample for two. Sharkey isn't in it with Ruhlin in that kind of a match. Billy Madden has not yet decided where the giant will do his work, but there is plenty of time for that. Long-armed and speedy Charley Goff will be with Ruhlin when he starts in.

Bob Fitzsimmons and Gus Ruhlin, who are matched to fight at Westchester in June, are not old acquaintances. In fact, when they signed articles it was the first time they had ever met.

The two men sized each other up at once and they evidently decided they could be good friends, even though they are to try to put one another to sleep with a punch. So they shook hands and talked on various subjects like two chums.

Fitzsimmons, when asked what he thought of Ruhlin, replied:

"I think Ruhlin is a gentleman, and I have not met a more sensible pugilist during my many years in the roped arena. There is nothing about him either in his ways or actions which would make you believe he was a fighter, as he conducts himself in a very gentlemanly manner and does not issue bluff challenges like other fighters are in the habit of doing.

"His challenge to me was a very businesslike one, in which he claimed he would like to meet me, as he thought he was entitled to the chance. I consequently decided to give him a fight, not because I was compelled to, but merely through the way in which he challenged me.

"Besides being possessed of these good manners, I want to say that he is a dangerous man of any of us, for as he has been defeating a number of good men during the past year I therefore expect him to give one of the hardest fights I ever had, and I hope the best man will win."

The Three Cushion Tournament.

The class A three-cushion tournament at the Grand is becoming more interesting daily. The standing of the players to date is:

Players.	W.	L.	Players.	W.	L.
Peterson	0	1	Staley	1	1
Lawrence	1	0	Campbell	1	0
Nolan	1	1	Hutchings	0	1

Monday night's game will be between Mr. Hutchings and Mr. Staley and it promises to be one of the best played of the tournament.

O'KEEFE'S KING OF THE HILLS.

He Wins the Green Tree Cup, the Important Coursing Event.

Ben O'Keefe, the veteran sportsman, who has done more than any man in St. Louis to advance the interests of coursing, was the happiest man in town on Sunday afternoon.

His great hound, King of the Hills, then won the Green Tree Cup, the most important coursing event that has taken place in St. Louis this year, and won it only after a desperate struggle.

This was the wind-up of the coursing season and there was a big crowd out to see the finish. The race for the Green Tree Cup was run in this way:

FIRST ROUND.

King of the Hills beat Farewell.
Baby Barnes beat Van Natta.
Lord Klenkirk beat Glory Quayle.
Fortuna beat Hot Times.
Black Beauty beat Lady Hortense.
Van Nye beat Harvest Maid.

FIRST TIES.

King of the Hills beat Baby Barnes.
Lord Glenkirk beat Fortuna.
Black Beauty beat Van Nye.

SECOND ROUND TIES.

King of the Hills, a bye, Lord Glenkirk drawn.
Black Beauty, a bye with Warburton.

FINALE.

King of the Hills beat Black Beauty and won the cup.

The season was the best the St. Louis Coursing Club has ever had, but they hope to beat it next season, when they will have a more commodious field to do their racing on.

A TEN-INNING GAME.

HARGADINE-M'KITTRICKS AND BOHM BROTHERS PLAY IT.

GREAT DAY FOR AMATEURS.

Hundreds of Games Played All Over the City on Saturday and Sunday Afternoons.

The new baseball ground at Athletic Park on which the Hargadine-McKittricks are to play their Saturday and Sunday games were christened on Saturday afternoon with a game in which the Hargadine-McKittricks met the Bohm Bros.' team, formerly known as the Eagle Bs.

The H. McK.'s appeared in their new uniforms and presented a fine appearance on the field.

The game was by no means a pitcher's battle. The men who twirled were not in condition and a slugging match was the result, the final score being 18 to 14 in favor of the Hargadine-McKittricks

From the opening to the close of the game each pitcher was hit hard, and no less than eight home runs were scored.

The game ended at the close of the seventh inning on account of darkness.

On Sunday afternoon the same teams met again at Athletic Park, and this time they played real baseball. For nine innings neither side appeared to be able to get the best of the other. At the close of the ninth the score was 3 to 3. In their half of the tenth the Hargadine-McKittricks, by hard hitting and errors of the opposition, piled up eight runs.

Bohm Bros., in their half, were unable to score, a splendid running catch by Moran at center cutting off their last chance in that direction. The Hargadine-McKittricks were loudly cheered for their splendid rally in the ninth. The score was:

A True Old Tale About The Only McNichol!

"This keeping house," said Jonas Kedge,
"Why, Tom—it puts my teeth on edge.
To board is worse, to lodge still more;
I tell you life becomes a bore!
And yet while streams of misery trickle,
I hear you cry 'Go see McNichol!'
My dear old man, you're crazy still,
This time your friend can't fill the bill!"

"No, sir—I'm right; I'll prove you wrong,
And put your ills where they belong.
I've pondered o'er McNichol's rhymes,
I've pondered on McNichol's rhymes,
And laughed like you and grinned in glee
To think what he could do for me.
By George! Things got so very hot
I nearly went wild on the spot."

"The house won't stay clean not a minute,
The dust and grime is right here in it,"
My wife declared; the girls got mad,
And sassed her; even the best we had.
Then when I came to understand,
I said, 'By Jove, I'll take a hand!'
I joined a string of folks intent
On living right, away we went.
"Laugh if you want to, it's a fact,
A man just naturally has to act
Or be snowed under. Life became
A thing of joy; home worth its name.
I got things new and sweet and nice,
A grumbler couldn't fight the price.
Our hired girl laughs all day long
—Mac can't assist you: MAN YOU'RE WRONG!"

IS AGUINALDO HIDING IN MANILA?

Belief Prevails That He Has Not Left Luzon.

KEEPING IN A SAFE PLACE.

IT IS SAID THAT HE COULD EASILY ESCAPE DETECTION.

Gen. Otis Is of the Opinion That the Tagal Leader Has Not Been Out of the City Since the First of the Year.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—In the mail from Manila which has just arrived at the War Department there were at least two communications expressing the conviction that Aguinaldo is hiding in that city. One of these letters is from a United States Secret Service official, who had found conclusive evidence that the Tagal leader had been in Manila since the rebellious armies in Luzon were dispersed and who was satisfied that as he had not escaped by water he was possibly still concealed in the native part of the town.

The other letter from an officer attached to headquarters, who voiced the opinion of all the higher military authorities that Aguinaldo was certainly not in any of the outlying districts on the Island of Luzon, for American troops had too thoroughly overrun the entire country for the rebel chief to escape detection, and especially as in every province there were enough enemies of Aguinaldo to have betrayed him to the soldiers had his presence made it possible. Other officers recently returned from the Philippines confirm the impression that Aguinaldo would naturally seek safety in the Tagal quarter at Manila, where he would possibly find greater seclusion and security than in any other place in the archipelago, especially as it is not frequented by American troops or natives who sympathize with the American rule. Aguinaldo is said to be devoted to his wife and children, who have been living in Manila for several months, and it is inconceivable to those who know him that he has not made frequent visits to his family. It is said that on account of his physical appearance and with his ingenuity he would incur little or no chance of detection if he assumed the guise of a native peddler or ordinary workman.

Gen. Otis is said to have no doubt that Aguinaldo has not been out of Manila since the first of this year, but he has refused to offer any reward for his apprehension, though the Secret Service men have every assurance that betrayal by natives would speedily follow the offer. Every army officer who has been in the Philippines frankly declares that it has always been the ambition of every American in the service to capture Aguinaldo.

The best work of officers and men has always been with the main end in view of bringing in the elusive little leader. It is well known that Gen. Otis expected his capture last fall in Northern Luzon, and had arranged to send him to the United States.

It is said Otis has since changed his mind about the desirability of sending him away from the island and believes it best not to be embarrassed by having him on his hands, as some elements would be dissatisfied if he were not executed and others would revolt if he should not have the fullest liberty.

BIG CLAIM AGAINST MEXICO.

Eighteen Million Acres of Land in Lower California.

MONTEREY, Cal., April 9.—A paper of considerable international importance has just been received from London by Jacob R. Leese of this city, son of the California pioneer, Jacob P. Leese. The paper is the original grant from the Mexican Government made in 1863 to Jacob P. Leese and others of 18,000,000 acres of land in Lower California for colonization purposes.

A further contract was made with the Mexican Government by which Leese paid $100,000 for the land on the condition that if he failed to colonize because of the war before the expiration of the allotted time the Government was to return him $50,000 of the amount.

This amount has never been paid, and it is stated that the Mexican Government absolutely refuses to recognize Leese's claim. J. R. Leese, eldest son of Jacob Leese, received a deed from his father shortly before the latter's death, assigning him one-eighth of the entire 18,000,000 acres, and it is this as well as the $50,000 for which he is fighting. He intends to move at once through the State Department at Washington for recognition of his claim, and a restoration of his property and that of the other heirs.

Y. M. C. A. School Closing.—The closing exercises of the educational department of the St. Louis Young Men's Christian Association will be held Monday evening in the association's hall, Grand and Franklin avenues.

INCREASE OF MONEY

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE GOVERNMENT'S HISTORY.

MORE GOLD AND MORE SILVER.

Per Capita Has Passed the $26 Line and the Total for the First Time Beyond Two Billions.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The statement issued by the Treasury Department for April, 1900, shows more money per capita, more gold, more silver and a larger total of money in circulation than ever before. For the first time in the history of the country the per capita circulation has crossed the $26 line and the year 1900 carried the total for the first time past the two billion dollar line while the amount of gold and gold certificates in circulation is larger than at the corresponding date of any previous year.

The "circulation statement," which is issued at the beginning of each month, shows the total money in circulation April 1, 1900, to be $2,021,274,506, and on April 1, 1899, $1,927,846,942, while on the corresponding date in 1898 it was $1,756,058,645; on April 1, 1897, it was $1,669,000,694, and on April 1, 1896, $1,528,629,463. This shows an increase in total money in circulation in four years of $492,645,043, or 32 per cent.

The per capita money in circulation, or the average amount for each individual in the United States is also larger than ever before, being $26.12 (calculating the present population at 77,395,000), against $25.45 a year ago, $23.69 two years ago, $23.01 three years ago, and $21.53 on April 1, 1896.

The amount of gold in circulation is also greater than at the corresponding date of any preceding year, the total gold and gold certificates in circulation on April 1, 1900, being $785,845,549, against $727,748,591 on April 1, 1899, $618,448,941 on April 1, 1898, $554,582,096 on April 1, 1897, and $489,151,505 on April 1, 1896; the increase during the four years being $296,694,044, or 60 per cent.

The amount of silver in circulation, including standard silver dollars, subsidiary silver, silver certificates and Treasury notes of 1890, which were isued for the purchase of silver bullion and are to be retired when the silver is coined and put in circulation, amounts to $631,133,689, against $626,982,804 on April 1, 1899; $610,661,729 on April 1, 1898; $569,024,775 on April 1, 1897, and $558,524,447 on April 1, 1896.

The following table shows the total money and total gold in circulation on April 1 of each year from 1890 to 1900:

1890	$1,437,494,052	$508,562,567
1891	1,530,080,464	552,785,919

DR. HILLIS IS RETICENT.

Will Not Further Discuss His Letter of Demission.

NEW YORK, April 9.—There will be a conference at Buffalo between Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, whose letter of demission from the Presbyterian ministry was presented to the Chicago Presbytery last Monday, and the committee from that body which was appointed for the purpose of considering the letter of resignation. This, it is believed, is due in part to the attitude of the members of Plymouth Church, who don't wish their pastor to have any further theological relations or discussions with the Chicago presbytery, and so the realization on the part of the committee that Dr. Hillis' determination to insist upon the acceptance of his resignation would make futile a conference such as was proposed. Dr. Hillis is exceedingly sensitive upon the subject, and refuses to discuss it.

"I regard the incident as closed," he said last night.

FOUGHT IN THE COURTROOM.

Police Sergeant McGlynn Fined $50 Therefor.

AN UNPROVOKED ASSAULT.

STRUCK JOHN IRWIN, A PRISONER OUT ON BOND.

Bystanders Interfered and the Sergeant Was Brought Up Before Judge Spencer—Matter Will Go to the Board.

As the result of a fight between Police Sergeant James J. McGlynn of the Fourth District and John Irwin, indicted under the habitual criminal act, which occurred in the entrance to Judge Selden P. Spencer's Criminal Courtroom at 10:30 Monday morning, McGlynn was fined $50 by the court.

For five minutes the whole courtroom was in an uproar and there was the wildest confusion. Court officers and policemen were running hither and thither. Judge Spencer himself left the bench and went forward to assist in calming the tumult. The Judge directed Deputy Sheriff John A. Pohlman to separate the two belligerents. The deputy had to tear the men apart, so desperate was their clinch. Sergt. McGlynn's face was scratched and Irwin's cheek bore marks of fingers.

Irwin is an ex-convict, 23 years old, having been sent up for highway robbery in 1894. He was released three years ago and went to work for the Missouri Wrecking Co., where he is now stable boss.

Some months ago Irwin was arrested on the street under the Chief of Detectives' order concerning ex-convicts. He was indicted as an habitual criminal by the grand-jury. Twice his case has been continued. Monday morning he appeared for trial and on account of the absence of witnesses the State continued the case. Irwin is out on bond.

As Irwin was walking through the doors leading out of the courtroom he was accosted by Sergt. McGlynn, who stood in the entrance. Five witnesses say that the Sergeant called Irwin a vile name and said:

"I'll fix you yet!"

Irwin stepped into the clerk's room to avoid the sergeant, who followed him. Frederick Vincent, superintendent of the Missouri Wrecking Co. stepped between the men.

Mr. Vincent says Sergeant McGlynn reached over his shoulder and grabbed Irwin by the throat. Irwin then struck the sergeant in the face. McGlynn called to his assistance Police Sergeant Crojonosski, who started to help him when Deputy Sheriff Pohlman rushed forward and made the fighters break away.

The men who were in the entry and saw the fight were Frederick Vincent, Samuel Lears, John Reynolds, Charles Dawson and Jesse Dawson. All say that the sergeant first attacked Irwin and that the latter tried to evade him. "McGlynn was laying for the boy," they aver.

Irwin's attorney, Rozier P. Meigs, says he will apply for a warrant against Sergeant McGlynn for assault and battery.

Judge Spencer at once summoned the sergeant, Irwin and the witnesses into court and investigated the affair. All the witnesses testified substantially as stated.

The court fined Sergeant McGlynn $50 for contempt of court and stated that he would certify the result of the hearing to the police board with recommendations.

SERIOUS RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

The train was in charge of Conductor William Couse and Engineer John Halloran.

"Each renewal of a promissory note requires stamping the same as the original note and payment of interest in advance on a matured note is considered to be a renewal of the same.

"Pledges of stock, bonds, etc., as collateral security for the payment of loans are liable to tax under the provisions of that paragraph referring to 'mortgage or pledge' at the rate of 25 cents for each $500 or fractional part thereof in excess of $1000.

"No tax is imposed on transactions where stock is hypothecated as security for the payment of money simply by delivery of the certificates to the lender or deposited as a basis of credit without a mortgage or some other written instrument being executed or made whereby the said stock is pledged to secure the payment of a definite and certain sum of money.

"As modifying the foregoing rulings, attention is called to the following amendment to the war revenue act:

"Whenever any bond or note shall be secured by a mortgage or deed of trust but one stamp shall be required to be placed on such papers; provided, that the stamp tax placed thereon shall be the highest rate required for such instruments, or either of them."

Internal Revenue Collector Grenner Monday announced the above Federal ruling on the stamp tax as it applies to loans secured by pledges of collateral.

"BOYS WILL BE BOYS."

Incarceration in the House of Refuge Does Not Seem to Disprove the Ancient Axiom.

> "We worry the superintendent because we have nothing else to do."
> —Boys' philosophy at the House of Refuge.

Sunday Albert Henley, an instructor in the Cook Avenue Methodist Church, made a present of spinning tops to the 200 boys of the primary department in the House of Refuge.

Mr. Henley made a short speech to the boys and asked them why they had been worrying the manager so much of late. They replied that it was because they had nothing else to do. They promised to be good if there was "anything in it" and then he produced the tops.

FELL ILL AMONG STRANGERS.

Girl From Madison Taken to the City Hospital.

Elise Schmidt, a good-looking girl, 15 years old, left her home in Madison, Ill., at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon to look for employment in St. Louis. About 7 that night Officer Scanlan found the girl lying unconscious on North Market street, between Hall street and the river. She was taken to the City Hospital in an ambulance.

At the hospital the girl revived sufficiently to tell her name and address. She said that her stepmother told her to come to St. Louis and get a place. She crossed the river and walked around the streets near the levee for an hour or so, then she became ill.

Having nowhere to go the girl dropped on the street when no longer able to stand and there the officers discovered her. She could not tell how long she had lain on the ground.

The nurses got her story by repeated coaxing. The girl soon relapsed into an unconscious condition and remained so all night. Monday morning she was still unconscious.

KING AMONG BANK ROBBERS.

REFORMED SAFE-BLOWER DUNLAP, AT THE AGE OF 60, GOES BACK TO HIS TRADE.

He Was One of the Northampton Gang Which Looted a Bank There of $1,700,000.

JAMES DUNLAP, KING OF SAFE BLOWERS.

CHICAGO, April 9.—James Dunlap, who with a gang of safe-blowers, startled the world by looting a bank at Northampton, Mass., of $1,700,000, has been connected with the robbery of the Pate Bank at Hoopeston, Ill., according to Capt. Colleran. Something over $3000 was taken. Dunlap has been taken back to Hoopeston for trial.

The Chicago police had supposed Dunlap had quit his criminal pursuits and settled down to pass his old age in honest living. He is 60 years old, dresses very neatly, and has every appearance of a well-to-do man.

When his last term in the penitentiary expired a couple of years ago Dunlap came to Chicago and started a saloon at Twenty-first street and Wabash avenue. He professed to have "quit the business for good." Detectives and police officers admired him for his shrewdness. They have dropped into his buffet day after day and were on friendly terms with him. But it appears that Dunlap has taken trips out of the city at different times. There have been numerous bank robberies in the small towns within a radius of 100 miles of Chicago in the past year. It is estimated half a million dollars would not more than cover the total booty. Meanwhile Dunlap has lived in gorgeous style in a commodious flat at 2252 Wabash avenue. These apartments are furnished exquisitely with the costliest bric-a-brac. It is said Dunlap must have spent $3000 in decorating the rooms.

Dunlap's arrest was effected by Detectives Conick, O'Keefe, Culihane and Murtaugh of Central Station. A stylishly dressed housekeeper answered the door bell. The woman shrieked and fought desperately when she discovered the callers were police officers. She was quickly overpowered. The detectives sat down and waited for the veteran cracksman to return. They did not suspect that he would come direct from successful operations in the country. Dunlap entered the flat with his latchkey at 6 o'clock. He had a black satchel, containing a full set of finely wrought steel drills, which he had used on the vault at the Pate Bank early that morning. He was extremely cool when the officers pounced upon him and deprived him of his revolver.

IT MELTED STEEL LIKE WAX

Heat of 5400 Degrees Generated by a German Chemist in the Presence of Mr. Edison.

NEW YORK, April 9.—It is difficult for the mind to contemplate a temperature of 5400 degrees Fahrenheit, in which great bars of steel melts like a wax candle around a wick. This temperature, it was announced by those who made the experiment in Thomas A. Edison's laboratory at Orange, N. J., was generated by a new process.

Let no layman measure the heat of the sun at close range. The men who made this experiment measure the intensity of heat by the time it takes to melt a bar of steel of given resistance.

The experiment was made in Mr. Edison's presence by Louis Dreyfus of Frankfort-on-the-Main, who wished to demonstrate to the wizard the practicability of the process invented in Essen, Germany. The process consists in the combustion of a certain chemical compound, in connection with powdered aluminum.

Mr. Dreyfus placed in a crucible a bar of steel six inches in length and half an inch in diameter. Placing around it a teacupful of his chemical and pouring on this a small quantity of powdered aluminum, he touched a match to it and in an instant it blazed up, throwing out an intense heat. In less than 10 seconds by the watch the steel bar was completely melted.

Mr. Edison was delighted at the results and said the process was what he had been in search of for a long time. He ordered some of the chemical for further experiments.

Mr. Dreyfus said the process was now being used in the welding together of steel rails. By a simple chemical device the two chemicals, or rather the chemical and the aluminum, can be fed continuously at at desired point and the local application of the heat continued as long as desired.

It was agreed by the experts that the heat was 5400 degrees Fahrenheit.

MOTHER KILLED WHILE SHE SLEPT.

Murder of Mrs. Charles Buechert at De Soto.

HER HUSBAND IS MISSING.

THE CRIME DISCOVERED BY TWO LITTLE CHILDREN.

The Woman's Throat Had Been Cut, but Nothing Indicating a Reason for the Crime Can Be Found.

Written for the Post-Dispatch.

DE SOTO, Mo., April 9.—A horrible murder occurred in this city last night, and was not discovered until a late hour this morning, when the screams of two little girls attracted the attention of neighbors to the house, where they discovered the dead body of Mrs. Charles Buechert lying in bed with her throat cut. Every circumstance indicated that she was murdered while asleep. Her husband was missing, and upon investigation all his personal effects and clothing were also missing.

Buechert is a German and in the employ of the railroad shops here, and as far as known he and his wife were happily married. They entertained friends until 9 o'clock last night, and Buechert, who was quite a musician, played most all evening upon the violin and was exceedingly pleasant.

He was the third husband of the dead woman, and the two little girls who discovered their dead mother were his stepchildren. No reason can be given for the crime. Sheriff Long and deputies are looking for the missing husband.

OWEN LAVIN DRANK THE LYE

Thought It Was Water, and Gastritis Followed, Causing His Death.

Gastritis, following the drinking of a lye solution by accident, caused the death of Owen Lavin, 25 years old, a gas-fitter, who lived at 1425 Spruce street. Such was the Coroner's verdict Monday.

March 22 was the birthday of Thomas Lavin, the brother of Owen. The brother says that Owen drank some beer that day in celebration of the event. Later in the day he called on some friends, John Miller and family, at 1514 Clark avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Miller went to the attic for something and Mary, the daughter, remained in the kitchen with Lavin. They had been eating some lunch. Lavin got drowsy and sat down on the window sill and fell asleep. After a time he got up and went to the range. A tomato can was sitting on the back of the range. In the can was a box of lye, covered with water.

Lavin drank the water before Miss Miller had time to warn him. The water was a strong lye solution.

Lavin was taken to the City Hospital suffering fearful agony. His throat and stomach were terribly scalded. For several days he received treatment at the hospital and so far recovered that he was able to walk home on March 26.

It is said that he drank a few glasses of beer after reaching home and this aggravated the injuries to his stomach. Lavin had to take to bed again. He died Saturday.

HE ATTEMPTED TO ESCAPE

Convicted Prisoner Dashed Out of the Criminal Court and Was Captured by a Policeman.

Albert Tate, a young and powerful negro, made a desperate dash for liberty from the Court of Criminal Correction Monday at noon, and created much excitement before he was captured.

Tate had been tried before Judge Willis Clark on a charge of petit larceny and had been found guilty. As he was being led back to the cage he jerked away from Deputy Sheriff Busack and ran down the main aisle of the courtroom. The courtroom was crowded.

One or two of the spectators, who was in the hall, tried to stop the fugitive. They were knocked down and did not succeed in stopping him.

He jumped against the swinging doors and dashed out into the hall. Several deputy sheriffs were standing here, but they did not realize what was occurring until the negro was half way down the iron stairway.

Patrolman Charles H. Sidner of the Sixth Police District was standing at the bottom of the stairs. He stepped in front of Tate and grabbed him.

By this time Deputy Sheriff Busack had reached the stairway and took Tate into custody. Tate was taken back into the courtroom and Judge Clark instructed Sheriff Pohlmann to go to the Assistant Prosecuting Attorney and procure a warrant alleging an attempt to escape from the custody of an officer. A conviction on this charge will carry with it a penitentiary sentence.

FIFTY IRON WORKERS STRUCK.

Foundry Helpers Ask for an Increase in Pay.

Fifty men employed as helpers at the Shickle, Harrison & Howard Foundry, Twelfth street and Chouteau avenue, quit work Monday morning.

One of them stated to the Post-Dispatch that their demand for an increase of salary from $1.35 to $1.50 a day had been refused.

"The chances are against us," he said, "but we intend to stay out until some concessions are made to us. Others have received an advance in wages and we think we are entitled to the same recognition. No, I do not think the strike will be general, because the molders are satisfied with their wages and as we are not members of their union there is not much likelihood that they will join us."

GRAND JURY'S PARTIAL REPORT.

Indictments Returned Against A. B. Johnson and Others.

The April Grandjury made its first partial report in Judge Spencer's court Monday at noon. The report was brief and but few indictments were returned. One was against A. B. Johnson, alleging forgery. He was charged with having defrauded the Merchants-Laclede bank out of $1958 by means of a forged check.

Other indictments were: Burglary and larceny—William Doyle; assault with intent to kill—William Harrison and Arthur Payton; grand larceny—Louis Grohl, Alphonse Rombeau, Charles Kinnerman.

Charles Hodgman's Funeral.

The two brothers of the deceased—George Hodgman of Minneapolis and W. W. Hodgman of Colorado—arrived Monday to attend the funeral.

THE MARKETS.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 9, 1900.

A better tone prevailed this morning. Cables for wheat were stronger, giving the bulls some encouragement, which they were quick to take advantage of.

Prices advanced slightly in the early trade, but no violent changes were made. The feeling was better, but there was a lack of stimulating influences. Trade lacked confidence and at all times was cautious in its dealings, playing shy of any vigorous shiftings in price.

Though opening higher to-day, the wheat market later, oppressed by a weight of grain, sagged somewhat, but on a better demand being developed, it recovered some of the lost ground, and with occasional setbacks, ruled strong during the early trade. The increase in Northwestern receipts and local postings up to the average were bearish, statistics acting as a damper on the spirits of bulls. To offset the influence of this class of news there were crop reports which were interesting reading. France sends out another report regarding the situation there. It is decidedly bullish in character, but on account of the amount of news of late coming from that quarter, it failed to have much effect. The Department of Agriculture reports the crop to be manifestly in a much worse condition than in 1899. Though couched in a manner not calculated to excite traders, there is every evidence that this report does less than exaggerate the situation. The first report of French damage gave the loss as 15 per cent. Later another report placed damage at 20 per cent. These quite likely were entirely separate reports, in which case the damage to the crop would be 35 per cent. If the second report was simply a correction of the first it would not be so bad, but neither side of the market can afford to be hasty in forming an opinion, but must wait till some definite news is received.

Trade at present is naturally of a halting nature. The Government Crop Report will be out to-morrow, and although there may be little in it to interest the trader, it will probably give the true situation in the wheat States and uncertainty will be at an end.

Bullish news to-day was not confined to France alone; other imports reports were received. Austria and Hungary increase in their complaints. Indian area is reported 30 per cent below 1899, not over one-half average crop expected.

World's shipments, 6,997,000 bu, compared with 7,253,000 bu last week and 7,634,000 bu last year. The wheat on passage is now 40,560,000 bu, against 41,440,000 bu last week and 37,808,000 bu last year. Black Sea shipments, 632,000 bu. Imports wheat to United Kingdom, 776,000 bu, of which 160,300 bu came from Atlantic ports.

Receipts of wheat at St. Louis to-day were 27,860 bu, against 10,315 bu a year ago. Of these 382 sks and 36 cars were local, against 851 sks and 12 cars a year ago.

Receipts of wheat at Minneapolis and Duluth to-day were 608 cars, as compared with 427 cars same date last year.

May wheat was slow to open. July sold at 67¼c and at 37⅝c, 67⅝c, 67⅝c, 67⅝c and again at 67⅝c.

The English home-grown wheat now averages 4c higher than last year. The May price is 18c over us. The Liverpool stocks show a decrease of 56,000 bu.

Receipts of wheat at primary points to-day were 799,837 bu, compared with 524,000 bu same date last year. Shipments, 370,442 bu, compared with 102,000 bu same date last year.

Liverpool closed ¼d up for the day. Paris opened unchanged, but closed with an advance of 20 centimes, or 1c.

World's corn shipments, 4,994,000 bu, compared with 3,889,000 bu last week. Stock on passage, 10,080,000 bu compared with 8,760,000 bu last week and 9,616,000 bu last year. Receipts at St. Louis to-day were 509,050 bu, compared with 111,485 bu a year ago. Of these, 100 sacks and 459 cars were local, against 794 sacks and 94 cars the same day a year ago.

Cables had a restraining influence over to-day's market, also the heavy receipts were bearish factors. In spite of these facts prices showed some improvement during the early hours. There was some strength in wheat, and this was communicated to corn, giving it some upward boosts.

May opened with a bid of 38⅝c. July sold at 39⅝c, then at 39⅞c, and later fell to 39⅝c.

Receipts of corn at primary points to-day were 968,775 bu, as compared with 399,000 bu same date last year.

Shipments, 423,149 bu, compared with 187,000 bu same date last year.

The market to-day was not a wildly exciting one; there was not enough energy in the pit to give futures much strength.

Receipts at St. Louis to-day were 87,600 bu, compared with 66,000 bu the same day a year ago. Of these 72 cars were local, against 46 cars the same day a year ago.

Oats were dead to-day; little interest was felt in the cereal by the pit. Futures attracted hardly any attention, and throughout the session made few sales and maintained an extensively narrow range.

May was bid 25¼c and July 24¼c.

The weakness in all futures came near the close of the session. Wheat and corn both showed material losses in spite of all the bullish news received during the session.

May wheat sold down to 70¼c, after going up to 71c. July rose to 68¼c and fell to 67⅝@67½c. May corn sold up to 39c and down to 38¼c. July rose to 39⅞c and fell to 39⅛c. May oats sold at 25¼c and at 25⅛c, while July did not open.

PIT GOSSIP.

Views of the Grain Markets by Prominent Traders.

Schwartz-Dupee to Oswald Graves.

Little interest is shown in wheat, the activity and excitement in corn and hog market products diverting attention from it. Receipts continue to exceed those of last year, and there is really an unsatisfactory demand, though exports the week foot up 3,837,000 bu of wheat and flour, against 3,385,000 last year. Argentina shipped 2,336,000, against 1,656,000 a year ago, making 27,296,000 since Jan. 1, against 15,632,000 in 1899. Northwestern receipts come largely from interior elevators, they losing 4,200,000 during March, against 2,000,000 in March 1899. Crop prospects are generally good for an enormous harvest

The higher prices have developed more liberal marketings of corn by producers, and tended to curtail shipping and export demands. This week the nine primary Western points will get about 4,300,000 bu, against 2,279,000 the like week in 1899, an increase of very nearly 100 per cent. To counterbalance these is an increase in exports, 4,362,000 bu for the week, against 3,725,000 a year ago. Stocks of corn in the Bradstreet's visible are now 32,000,000 bu, against 44,000,000 in 1899, and 55,000,000 in 1898, but those two years' stocks were excessive. Former seasons generally show less than this year, and inasmuch as the 1899 crop was nearly as large as ever produced it is hardly likely there will be any scarcity up to the new harvest.

To J. W. Sanford.

Sentiment was extremely bearish at the close on Saturday, especially on wheat, and lower were freely predicted. Crop news from Paris, in fact all foreign crop news, appear to be bullish in character and cables reflect same in a degree, being up ¼ at Liverpool and about ½c advance at Paris. With this in view a higher range of values should result. Russia's small shipments and news from India are a couple of the attractive features and our home crop news is likely to cause some apprehension before long.

Chicago.—Seaboard exporters wire us as follows: "Cables come slowly this morning and are featureless, for we made liberal offers Saturday, but no acceptances. Wanted to do some business this week but don't start proper."

Ten cargoes wheat for sale off English coast, against 9 Saturday.

To Arthur C. Petri.

Broomhall cables: Another decrease in the world's shipments of about 1,000,000 bu, light offerings from America and a further decrease in the weekly stocks were the cause of the firmness in this market to-day.

Corn opened at declines of ⅛d, reflecting the easier feeling in the Western markets on Saturday, while the larger world's shipments also had a depressing tendency. Later the tone improved somewhat in sympathy with the advance in wheat.

On any weak spot would buy both wheat and corn.

It looks as if Argentine influence is more than discounted and Europe is getting ready to buy wheat here.

London—Spot wheat—Off coast, nothing doing; on passage, rather easier; 3d cheaper. Corn—Off coast, nothing doing; on passage, rather easier; partly 3d cheaper.

Chicago—Grain brought to Chicago by the Western roads during March aggregate 21,098 cars, a decrease from February of 1658 cars; March was greater than any since 1890. The gain over March, 1899, was 7044 cars.

By Bennett & Wasserman.

The concensus of opinion at this time is decidedly bearish, and rightly so. What, with an increase in the visible and a steady falling off in the spot demand for the grain, and the same reasons for a decline which were predominant last week, there is no reason why a shading off in prices should not result within the next few days, as it eventually must, unless there is a short scare before the time for the drop arrives.

The Russian shipments were the bull card today, and the strength caused by the decrease in these shipments was immediately reflected in the American markets. And then private cables stated that severe storms were raging throughout Austria, occasioning great damage to crops, and this materially helped the bullish side.

On the prospect of a million bu increase in the visible supply, John Cudahy sold about 100,000 bu in the Chicago market. Charles Smith followed with about the same amount, and Friedman and Dunn were the other heavy sellers.

There was smaller buying of corn to-day than has been seen in more than a week. Opinions of the best-posted traders were to the effect that, for the present, the market is liable to be a little weak, though there will be an ultimate advance in the price of the cereal, should present conditions prevail for the next few weeks.

STOCK YARD NOTES.

Receipts at the St. Louis National Stock Yards during the week ending April 7 were 8718 cattle, 38,061 hogs, 9076 sheep and 2838 horses and mules, against 11,235 cattle, 34,766 hogs, 4922 sheep and 2251 horses and mules received during the previous week. These figures show a decrease of 2517 cattle, an increase of 3295 hogs, an increase of 4154 sheep and an increase of 585 horses and mules. As compared with the corresponding week a year ago cattle show a decrease of 1600 head, the hogs increased 2800 head, sheep increased 6300 head, and horses and mules increased 700 head.

Mr. W. G. Harding, general live stock agent of the Mobile & Ohio Railway, was a visitor at the National Yards Saturday. He had with him the figures of live stock hauled by his road for export to Cuba in the past five months from and including November, 1899, to March, 1900. The list includes 6654 cattle, 857 calves, 8958 hogs 256 sheep, 145 horses and 724 mules.

Cattle buying for the Eastman trade will recommence at the National Yards on Monday. The Eastman cattle buying used to be an important factor on this market and is to be so again.

Cattle receipts at the National Yards so far this year are about 30,000 less than the highest record. It ought not to be much trouble to overcome this shortage during the next 10 weeks.

No Texas cattle were on sale on Friday either at St. Louis, Chicago or Kansas City. This is a very unusual coincidence.

MARKETS BY TELEGRAPH.

CHICAGO, April 9.—The wheat market began to-day's session strong and fairly active, the news generally being quite bullish. World's wheat shipments decreased for the week over a million; there was a moderate decrease on passage. Liverpool reported a decrease in weekly stocks, and that market closed ⅜d higher. There were complaints of drought in the southwest, and St. Louis and other points wired reports of bad crop prospects. The small Russian shipments, 400,000 bu, attracted considerable attention. May wheat opened ½@⅝ to ¾c over Saturday at 67@67⅛c to 67¼c, and shortly afterward touched 67⅜c. The Northwest was a seller here, presumably against local purchases, but their offerings were well taken. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 608 cars, against ½½9 last week and 427 a year ago. Receipts here were 117 cars, 1 of contract grade.

The market later broke to 66⅝c, influenced by the visible increase and the corn break. Shorts covered on the decline, however, and the market rallied, closing strong, May ⅜@½c over Saturday.

Corn was firm, helped principally by the wheat strength. Cables were lower, and receipts here 528 cars, 53 cars over the estimate. Shorts were the best buyers early, and they found offerings in the pit light. May opened ⅛c to ¼@⅜c over Saturday at 40@40⅛c to 40¼c, and sold to 40¼@40⅜c. The provisions strength was also a support to corn.

The corn market, after touching 39⅞c, was steady for a time, but renewed pressure from longs started a further slump, which brought out stop-loss orders. May slid off to 39¼c, where the market steadied, closing ¼@⅜c under Saturday, at 39⅜c.

The provisions market was strong and active. Hogs were higher, and there was a renewal of the talk of manipulation in nearby futures—especially in May ribs. Packers led the buying early. May pork opened 12½c, improved at $6.67½, and advanced to $6.82½, and May ribs showed an initial gain of 7½c at $7.10, later touching $7.20.

Oats were quiet, but firm, under the influence of the other markets. Local receipts were 268 cars. May opened ⅛@¼c, improved at 24⅝@25c.

Wall Street.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—In response to higher prices for Americans in London stocks moved upwards all around at the opening here. Gains in some cases were sharp fractions, and Brooklyn Transit gained 1⅝. Union Pacific rose ⅝, but fell off within an eight of Saturday's close on the opening sales.

The market became feverish on the advance and ultimately reacted on heavy selling of the tobaccos, Sugar and the metal stocks. Sugar sold below 109, compared with 115½, the opening price, and the metal stocks yielded over a point. Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg declined 5 points on the reiterated denial of the reported absorption of the road by the New York Central. Strength of the local tractions was better maintained than other departments. Railroads were quiet and rather heavy. The bond market was quiet and steady.

Important advances were made by half a dozen minor stocks, but the active list was reactionary. A vigorous drive against Sugar broke it 5 points. Other specialties gave way rapidly, People's Gas losing 3 points. The Pacifics were the weakest spot in the railroads, with their losses averaging about a point. Near 11 o'clock a rise in the tractions checked the selling and Sugar and People's Gas recovered 1½ each.

BURGLED THROUGH TRANSOMS

An Energetic Thief Stole Whisky, Cigars and Money From Saloons Near Tenth and Pine Streets.

The very latest variety of the real live burglar is the transom-opener. Unlike the porch-climber, he eschews the residence districts. He operates downtown. Saloons are his particular prey. The transom-opener has a Kentuckian's fondness for good whisky. He is also a connoisseur of good cigars.

Early Sunday morning the transom-opener started to work in the vicinity of the Imperial Theater. He waited until the last of the after-the-show drinking parties had left "The Jester" Saloon, just east of the theater. He also waited until the barkeeper put out the lights and took his owl car.

Then the transom-opener managed to climb to the top of the front door and push the transom ajar. Sliding down on the inside was easy.

It was equally easy to select a few bottles of the choicest whisky and a couple of boxes of the best cigars and then to leave via the side door.

But the transom-opener was not satisfied. He went as far east as Ninth and then decided on another sortie. He selected John L. Masterson's dramshop at the northwest corner of Ninth and Pine as the scene of his second effort.

He followed the same plan he pursued at "The Jester" and left with several boxes of choice cigars. Just to show his varied tastes, the transom-opener took $2 in coin and $1 in stamps from Mr. Masterson's exchequer.

But the transom-opener decided on still another coup before retiring. He walked as far as the northeast corner of Ninth and Locust streets. There he concluded he needed a little more exercise and climbed into Antonio Massa's liquid dispensary. In this resort he was satisfied with a few boxes of the best Havanas in the case.

Messrs. Pattison, Masterson and Massa have no clew to the transom-opener.

TO TEST HIGGINS' AUTHORITY.

Saloon Keeper Roselli Asks an Injunction Against the Excise Commissioner.

Jueple Roselli, a saloonkeeper at 108 South Seventh street, Monday, brought suit in the Circuit Court against Charles P. Higgins for evident purpose of testing the latter's authority to revoke saloon licenses. Roselli was ordered to appear before the Excise Commissioner and show cause why his license should not be revoked, on a police report that he kept a disorderly place.

Roselli asks an injunction restraining the Commissioner from revoking the license.

SUGAR GOES UP.

Advance of One-Sixteenth of a Cent on All Grades.

NEW YORK, April 9.—All grades of raw sugar were advanced 1-16c to-day.

Price, McCormick & Co.'s Cotton Letter.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Price, McCormick & Co. say in their to-day's circular: "The statistical position in cotton, as revealed by the figures of this morning, shows extraordinary strength. The stock at the ports is 150,000 bales less than last year. The stock at the interior towns is nearly 200,000 bales less than last year. The stock in Liverpool is 1,079,000 bales less than it was last year. The total stock being but little more than one-third of what it was last year. The receipts at the interior towns for the week promise to be almost nothing, comparatively speaking, and the amount of cotton coming in sight for the month of April, as estimated by competent authorities, will not exceed 250,000 bales. The short interest in the New York market is enormous, being estimated at 500,000 bales for August delivery alone, and over 1,000,000 bales of new crops. There is no pressure to sell actual spot cotton from any source, in fact, it is hard to buy, and the inquiries being received from American mills, both North and South, indicate that the extent to which they have supplied themselves has been grossly exaggerated. The visible supply towards the end of the year will probably be smaller than for 20 years, while consumption, unless checked by an advance in prices, will probably be double what it was in 1880. Under the circumstances those who are fortunate enough to own cotton have only to wait to obtain very full prices for it. There seems to be a natural corner in cotton which will be further aggravated by the complete crop failure in India and the small supplies available from Egypt. There is no attempt at artificial manipulation, so far as we are able to determine. The normal relation between an enormous demand and the small supply will probably result in extreme prices for the article. The sale of new crop deliveries seems to us a very perilous operation. At most there is a profit of half a cent a pound in it, and should anything happen to the growing crop there would be a loss of 2 or 3 cents a pound. The world will require a crop of 11,000,000 bales next year in order to prevent an advance in cotton to 9 or 10 cents.

THE CLAIMS OF TWO WOMEN

They Want to Inherit the Estate of the Late Joseph Maurer.

Two women claim to be common-law wives of the late Joseph Maurer and to establish the validity of their respective claims a suit was inaugurated in Judge Withrow's court Monday.

Maurer was a cigarmaker on Jefferson avenue, but was killed in the cyclone in 1896. One of the women is Amelia Dreiling, who alleges that she lived with Maurer as his wife for a period of 20 years.

The other woman is Annie Maurer. The attorneys of the latter have evidence in certain letters which Maurer wrote to her from Europe in 1895. The object of the contest is the estate of the deceased. The Dreiling woman has a daughter, 20 years of age, whom, she alleges, to be a child of Maurer.

LONELY MAN SOUGHT DEATH.

Charles Schumeister for His Family and Attempted Suicide.

Yearning for his wife and children at the old home in Austria and not having heard from them for years, Charles Schumeister, who since coming to America has called himself Schmidt, attempted to commit suicide with a razor Sunday night. He cut two long gashes in his throat with a razor. He will recover.

Schumeister is 43 years old and a saddlemaker. He occupied a lonely room at 214 Valentine street. At the City Hospital he said that he was once a prosperous business man in Austria, but three years ago he had reverses and was compelled to make an assignment, losing everything. He came to the United States, expecting to send for his family when he had earned enough money. He wrote to his wife nearly three years ago. Since then he has heard nothing from his family.

FILTRATION BILL CHANCES.

Believed That It Will Be Passed Tuesday Night.

The members of the Citizens' Filtration Association are expecting the House of Delegates to take favorable action Tuesday night on the bill to appropriate $50,000 for an experimental filtering plant. The association is composed of representatives of 32 business, scientific, professional and educational associations in the city and it is thoroughly in earnest in this effort to secure pure water.

The bill has now been in the hands of the House Ways and Means Committee about two weeks, which is thought to be a reasonable time for its consideration.

DAVIS SPEAKS FOR THE BOERS.

Missourian Had a Crowded House in Washington.

MUCH ENTHUSIASM SHOWN.

WHAT MR. DAVIS SAW OF THE FIGHTING.

He Believes That Eventually the Boers Will Be Free and That America Should Sympathize With Their Struggles.

> BOERS WILL BE FREE.
> In the light of the history of the rise and fall of empires, of the sad wrecks of proud and haughty nations who hated justice and honor and right but loved tyranny, oppression and wrong, that are strewn along the pathway of the centuries, I cannot but believe that God has intended that in the two South African republics liberty and equality of rights shall prevail and that the rugged, God-fearing Boers shall be forever free.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Mr. Webster Davis, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Interior, delivered an address last night on the war in South Africa, in the presence of an immense audience at the Grand Opera House. Every available bit of standing room was occupied and the audience manifested their appreciation by generous applause.

A score or more of public men, mainly Senators and Representatives in Congress, occupied seats on the stage and in the audience, among whom were the following: Senators Clay, Daniel, Teller, Bacon, Allen and Mason, and Representatives Talbert, Jett, Littlefield, Ridgeley, Robinson of Indiana, Burke of Texas, Ball, Gilbert, Latimer, Cox of Tennessee, Cowherd and Clark of Missouri, Bartholdt and Shafroth.

Mr. Davis was introduced by Mr. P. T. Moran, the chairman of the Executive Committee, who made a few introductory remarks. Mr. Davis delivered his remarks in an off-hand, easy style, referred to his notes only occasionally, and mainly when it was necessary to read an extract from some document or speech. He spoke for about two hours and at its close was warmly congratulated.

Mr. Davis said:

"The Boers of South Africa are among the pioneers of freedom—heroes of civil and religious liberty. They were the torch bearers who blazed the pathway for civilization through the primeval forests of the southern part of that great 'Dark Continent,' which has been the marvel of the ages. No country in all the world contains a nobler race of men and women; the descendants, too, of the heroic Netherlanders who, under William the Silent, wrested the independence of Holland from the hand of the Spanish tyrant. No people in all the world's history have made a more valiant effort to secure liberty for future peoples than they. And no people have endured more hardships in the cause of liberty and equality of rights than they. Indeed, it was and is their unconquerable love for liberty that has caused all their troubles.

Years ago the Boers planted the seed of liberty in the fertile valleys of the Cape of Good Hope, where a strong national spirit developed as early as 1806, when the colony passed into the hands of England. Soon thereafter ill feeling arose between Briton and Boer. Mr. Davis entered upon an exhaustive review of the relations between the Boers and the British Government from that time to the present. He described the "great trek" northward after the emancipation of their slaves, the foundation of the republic of Natal and its absorption by England and the rise of the South African Republic. England's acquisition of the diamond fields at Kimberley Mr. Davis characterized as a transaction without a parallel for "cupidity, dishonor and injustice." Of the material growth of the Dutch republics Mr. Davis said:

"Cities with all the modern improvements sprang up on the veldt and in the valleys as if by magic, and everywhere the church and schoolhouse told the story of the people's progress. It is no wonder the Boers became intensely proud of their homes in the Orange Free State and the Transvaal, and well may they feel that pride, for they have their homes in one of the grandest belts of valley, mountain and plain that the world has in it.

"In the light of the history of the rise and fall of empires, of the sad wrecks of proud and haughty nations, who hated justice and honor and right, but loved tyranny, oppression and wrong that are strewn along the pathway of the centuries, I cannot but believe that God has intended that in the two South African republics liberty and equality of rights shall prevail, and the rugged, brave-hearted, God-fearing Boers shall be forever free.

"But finally this period of peace and rest was broken by the discovery of gold in the Transvaal. Then it was that the British Government determined to seek a pretext for obtaining control of the richest gold fields in the world as it had before secured the richest diamond fields. That this is the real cause for the present war no one can doubt who will listen to the frequent remark made by Englishmen in South Africa, as well as in England, that 'the gold mines in the Transvaal are worth fighting for and we are going to keep on fighting until we get them.' The British love for gold is proverbial. Wherever gold has been discovered, there the British have turned a wistful and longing eye. When gold was discovered in Alaska, only a few years ago, it will be remembered how quickly an effort was made to extend the Canadian line far enough westward to take in the gold fields. And no doubt had the British Government not been anticipating the present trobles over the gold fields in the Transvaal there would have been trouble on the part of the United States Government in keeping control of the gold fields in Alaska."

Referring to the Jameson raid and certain incidents connected with it, Mr. Davis asked:

"How long would the people of our Republic stand it if foreigners from any country in the world were to come here and after getting rich in our gold mines would undertake to control our Government, and failing to do so would endeavor to destroy it?

"No flimsier pretext for robbery and murder ever emanated from the wickedest cabinet in Europe in its palmiest days than the British demand for a five-year franchise in the South African Republic. If this demand were granted not an Englishman in the Transvaal would renounce allegiance to the Queen and swear eternal allegiance to the Government of the South African Republic as against the British Government. The idea was to obtain the power to control the Government of the republic and at the same time remain British subjects. Who ever before heard of such a proposition? Would the citizens of the United States be willing to allow British subjects or the subjects of any other power to come here and control our own elections and our own Government and at the same time not renounce their allegiance to their own countries?

"The simple truth of the matter is that the British Government forced President Kruger into a quarrel after he had done everything in his power to avoid it. While negotiations were pending, British troops were being massed in South Africa. The basis of the negotiations meanwhile was ingeniously shifted so that as the British preparations for war had grown more complete the acceptance by the Boers of the so-called British terms would mean an ever increasing measure of submission and humiliation on the part of the Transvaal.

"The British demands were trumped up and are without a sound basis, either in morals or in law. It is a sad spectacle of the strongest empire in the world bringing domineering pressure to bear upon a tiny republic to influence a change of certain domestic policies, which are, in no sense, a part of the business of that empire. For the Boers to comply with the demands of the British Government would have meant the sacrifice of every vestge of essential sovereignty belonging to the Transvaal as an independent republic.

"The question of the naturalization of foreigners in the South African Republic is no more the business of the British Government than are the naturalization laws of the Republic of Mexico a matter of concern to the Republic of the United States of America. It is one of those questions of internal policy that pertains only to the Transvaal Government.

"The Boers have been greatly abused by the British because it is alleged they began the war. In other words, the Boers were too hasty; they would not wait until all the British troops had arrived in South Africa. Who ever heard of such nonsense? That great civilized nation of 400,000,000 of people are complaining because the people of the two little republics, who do not number, all told, more than 300,000 people, including men, women and children, insisted upon issuing their ultimatum, and then proceeded to give battle before the British hosts should arrive. While on the Boer side, all told, there were not more than 30,000 men, and these had but a few inferior cannon and no bayonets or swords at all. Practically the only arms they had were Mauser rifles.

"One Boer to ten British. And yet the Boers were not trained soldiers; only simple, plain farmers; like the thousands of rugged farmers in our own country. They are just plain, common people, precisely the same kind of people that Abraham Lincoln loved.

"As citizens of the greatest republic in the world, with which side should we sympathize? I say our sympathies should go out to that brave little band of patriots who are struggling to keep alive forever the fires of liberty upon the altars of those two young republics.

"We have seen many charges made by British officers and British newspaper correspondents that the Boers have frequently outraged the white flag and the red cross flag. Under investigation, not only among the Boers themselves, but among the 4000 British prisoners, including the officers, who were at Pretoria when we were there, we learned that these charges were absolutely unfounded. On the contrary we did learn that this was a set up job to deceive not only the people of Great Britain at home, but to deceive the peoples of other civilized countries.

"The truth is, I defy contradiction, that the British soldiers themselves are the parties who violated many of the rules of civilized warfare, and frequently ignored the white flag and also the red cross flag. It was my fortune to witness some of these scenes myself. On the top of Spion Kop, when that wonderful battle was almost over, a young Boer soldier—not more than 17 years of age—was passing by a wounded British soldier, and the British soldier asked him for a drink of water; as the tender-hearted Boer lad was kneeling down by his side to let him drink water from his own canteen, that British soldier thrust a bayonet into the poor boy's side. And I myself talked with him, and, kneeling by him, shed tears when he died.

"During the battle of Dundee there was a lull in the firing for a time, on account of the Boers seeing a buggy approaching them rapidly and floating a white flag. All awaited its arrival. At a distance of about 600 yards from them the buggy stopped, wheeled about, dropped the white flag and that innocent-looking buggy was suddenly transformed into a murderous Maxim gun, which felled nearly a dozen Boers. I talked with the man who captured that flag and saw it myself. It was a white flag with a small black stripe through the center, but at a short distance away it seemed perfectly white; that flag is now in the possession of Col. Blake, the brave American soldier who commands the Irish brigade, which is composed almost entirely of Irish-Americans, and no braver men are in the Boer army, said Gen. Joubert to me."

Mr. Davis described the storming of Spion's Kop by the Boers, after the British had occupied it, and his own visit to the battlefield seven days later.

"When the fight began," he said, "a giant Boer, in the prime of strength and manhood, was seen carrying a small Boer flag; in a short time he fell to rise no more. Then an old white-haired veteran picked up the fallen banner, and, waving it, urged his comrades on. With flowing hair and flashing eyes the old man rushed on, but suddenly a shell laid him low; ere the little flag touched the ground, however, a barefooted lad, only 13 years of age, who had been fighting in his shirt sleeves, leaped like a panther to the old man's side, and, snatching the flag from his grandfather's nerveless hand, raised it aloft and pushed on. A mighty shout arose from the Boers as they saw the gallant deed, and with renewed courage they made a fearful charge; following the flag, they rushed like an avalanche over the British trenches, and Spion's Kop was won."

Gen. Burgers, the Boer commander, had made several attempts to secure a cessation of artillery fire that the dead might be buried, but for several days without success. Finally, Gen. Buller accepted the Boer proposal to bury the British dead and offered to pay the bill.

"Gen. Burgers regarded this reply as an insult," Mr. Davis asserted, "but, nevertheless, concluded to bury the British dead. Then I visited the top of Spion's Kop and saw there the most horrible sight that could be imagined. Upon every hand were helmets, belts, canteens, bayonets and wearing apparel scattered about, covered with clotted blood. We saw feet and hands protruding through the ground, all swollen and skin burst asunder, while the rest of the body was covered with a thin coating of earth. The explanation was that these poor British soldiers had been buried by their comrades under a few inches of dirt. In other places we saw scores of dead British soldiers lying on the top of the ground just where they had fallen, no attempt having been made to bury them.

"As we descended from the hill we met the Boers going up to bury the British dead, who had been so sadly neglected by their own comrades and commanders, who amuse themselves by calling the Boers savages.

"Brave were the ancient Greeks of Athens and Sparta, who, with their allies, stood up to battle and to die to defend themselves against the Asiatic invasion. Brave was Alexander the Great and his Macedonians on the battlefield of Issus, where they won a victory against overwhelming odds. Brave was the struggle of the Tyrolese against the legions of Napoleon. Brave the stand made by the Switzers for liberty against the Hapsburg. Brave the wonderful charge of Pickett's men and the equally brave defense of the Union troops on the crimson heights of Gettysburg. Brave were the heroic dead who fell at Salamis and Marathon. Brave, indeed, were the famous 300 at Thermopylae. But equaly brave, gallant and chivalrous are the humble peasants of the veldt, who, defending the passes of the Drakensberg, or seeking death climbing the ruged sides of Spion Kop, wiling to die, if need be, to save their beloved republics from the British yoke of oppression.

"These men have the same spirit that prompted the farmers to face death for liberty at Lexington green; that nerved the arms of Americans at Saratoga, Bunker Hill and Brandywine; that warmed the hearts of Washington and his shivering patriots at Valley Forge, and at New Orleans, where Jackson and his men taught old England that easier were it to hurl the rooted mountain from its base than to force the yoke of slavery upon men determined to be free.

"Then why should we not sympathize with them? Why should not the greatest republic in the world assist the smallest of republics? Is the word 'liberty' to become obsolete in our national lexicon? Must this greatest republic of the world's history chain its destiny to the chariot wheels of the British Empire in her made race for land and gold? Shall the fair name of this great republic, whose prowess on land and sea has been the marvel of the century, be used in Europe by British officials and the British press as a menace to other European powers who are anxious to assist the Boers in their brave struggle for freedom and independence?

"Let us not drift away from the principles and doctrines of our fathers. Let us listen to the cry for help from all who struggle for liberty and justice. Let it not be said by future historians that this great republic arose in splendor and grandeur, that made the world stare, but it hated justice and liberty; it halted on its bright and shining march; it fell, and as it was going down the despotisms of earth, grinning from the tops of bloody thrones, shouted 'We told you so, we told you so.' Oh, may the 80 millions of American freemen see to it that the world may know that their sympathies are not with Great Britain, but with the struggling Boers, and let it be known that they believe the cruel war waged in South Africa should stop, and stop at once."

I Cure Varicocele

(W. A. COOK, M. D.)

Whatever may be the cause of varicocele, its injurious effect is well known. It depresses the mind, weakens the body, racks the nervous system and ultimately leads to a complete loss of sexual power. If you are a victim of varicocele come to my office and let me explain to you my process of treating it. You will then not wonder why I have positively cured more than 700 cases of this dire disease during the past twelve months. Under my treatment the patient improves from the very beginning. All pain instantly ceases. Soreness and swelling quickly subside. The pools of stagnant blood are forced from the dilated veins, which rapidly assume their normal size, strength and soundness. All indications of disease and weakness vanish completely and forever, and in their stead come the pride, the power and the pleasure of perfect health and restored manhood.

I also cure to stay cured STRICTURE, SYPHILITIC BLOOD POISON, NERVO-SEXUAL DEBILITY and all reflex complications and associate diseases and weaknesses of men. To these maladies alone I have earnestly devoted 30 of the best years of my life. Physicians having stubborn cases to treat are cordially invited to consult with me. I make no charge for private counsel, and give to each patient a legal contract in writing, backed by abundant capital, to hold for my promise. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made life anew to multitudes of men?

If you cannot call at my office, write me your symptoms fully. My home treatment by correspondence is always successful. Address W. A. COOK, M. D., or

THIRD WAS NOT THE CHARM

Mrs. Broin Was Married Three Times and Now She Asks a Warrant for the Last Husband.

After 21 years of married life, Mrs. Eleanor Broin says she has suddenly discovered that her husband married her for her money, and she has left him.

Mrs. Broin now lives with friends at 1721 South Tenth street. John Broin, the husband, is a wagonmaker at 1835 Menard street.

The Broins were married in 1879. Mrs. Broin is 52 and he is 43. Broin is her third husband. She has had four children by this marriage, all of whom are dead.

Mrs. Broin says she has always had great confidence in men and it required a great deal of evidence to make her believe in one's duplicity.

Monday morning she called on Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Johnson and asked for a warrant against her husband. She thought that by getting a warrant against him she might be able to recover her money, saying that Mr. Broin had gotten $2750 from her before she made the discovery that he married her for her money.

Mrs. Broin was told to apply again Wednesday at the warrant office with more specific complaints.

STEEL PALACE FOR A PRINCE.

The Palatial Residence of the Future Ruler of Japan.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 9.—Four thousand tons of steel, costing nearly $250,000, have been shipped to Tokio by the Carnegie Co. for the new palace to be erected for the Crown Prince of Japan, only son of the Emperor, whose marriage to the 15-year-old daughter of Prince Kujo was recently arranged. The palace will cost $2,500,000 and will take five or six years to build. All the steel for the frame and other metal work was made in this city and shipped to Tokio. The last shipment went forward a week ago, and R. D. Gotlieb of the Carnegie Co. will arrive in Tokio this week to direct the erection of the steel skeleton.

The new palace will be built of marble and steel. It will be only two stories high and will be 270 by 400 feet.

The new palace, which will adjoin the palatial home of the Mikado, will, it is claimed, stand up under the most severe earthquakes.

GOV. TANNER IS IMPROVING

He Passed Through St. Louis Monday Morning on His Way Home From Florida.

John R. Tanner, Governor of Illinois and candidate for United States Senator, passed through St. Louis Monday morning on his way to Springfield from Palm Beach, Fla., whither he went a month ago for his health.

With him were Mrs. Tanner; the Governor's physician, Dr. L. C. Taylor of Springfield; Judge and Mrs. I. N. Phillips of Bloomington and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dorman of Springfield. The party traveled over the Illinois Central Railroad in the Governor's private car.

Gov. Tanner has not been seeing reporters recently, but Dr. Taylor discussed the condition of his health with the Post-Dispatch.

"I have noted a remarkable improvement in the Governor's health since he left for his Florida trip," he said. "I have been with him constantly and have seen with pleasure that he has grown better every day. I believe that he is now on his way to complete recovery and will soon be able to get back into politics to any extent that pleases him. Of course, I know nothing about his political plans, but I understand that even, when he was a very sick man, he continued to direct his campaign."

It is said that Gov. Tanner will spend two weeks upon his return to his executive duties to the consideration of important business that has accumulated at his office in his absence. Then it is expected that he will take up his campaign with vigor.

JUST A WORD OR TWO

And now they say that Li Hung Chang,
With praise of whom the country rang,
Not very long ago, sir,
May lose, with coat and peacock plume,
His head. He did, forsooth, presume
Responsibility to assume
For Leung Chito's woe, sir.

For Leung did a missive write,
And Blaine's advice Li o'erlooked quite;
He didn't "burn that letter."
Now Empress An is full of ire;
Li Hung from all his jobs she'll fire
And to his head she may aspire,
With Leung as abettor!

And now cometh Harry Vardon, champion golfer of all the earth, and when beaten in a practice game at Yale, sayeth: "Ye are dubs; ye know not the rules at all, at all." Which is rather humiliating to all of us bonnie Scots who have been living on oatmeal and talking a la Bobbie Burns for so long. How about that, Stuart Stickney, and some more of you?

Col. Joseph Chamberlain, who plunged England into its present war and then put in his time raising orchids—while the Boers are raising several kinds of something else, be it added—is coming to the United States to rest—after the war is over. He hasn't packed his luggage yet, however.

You remember the "great, gray-green, greasy Limpopo River" that Kipling writes so much about in the "Just So" stories in the Ladies' Home Journal? Well, it's a real river, in spite of that cognomen. It forms the northern boundary of the Transvaal, too. Perhaps if he uses real rivers, with such queer and musical names, we will find that the Kolokolo bird is real, too.

There's a softness in the atmosphere,
The breeze is warm and bland;
The small boys gather in the lot—
The baseball time's at hand.

Col. Peeler would be Sheriff of Bates County. Good name for such an officer.

I saw an unique dish at a Lenten luncheon lately. It was a mound, or rather a ring, of white ice cream, the center of which was filled with candied violets. All around the outside, on the rim of the dish, were real violets, with green leaves. It was as beautiful as it was delicious.

John Drew—yes, he did—pretty well this last week.

A Washington man says President McKinley eschews colored shirts and always appears in immaculate white. He must change them nearly as often as he does his mind

Out in the park, where the grass is green,
Where the sunlight falls thro' a leafless screen;
And the birds hop strangely from twig to bow—
I'd like to be out in the park right now,
While the spring is new, ere the freshness dies,
Go out to the park right now, if you're wise.

Sunday is the day of rest and is dedicated to the Prince of Peace. Yet, of 34 of the world's greatest battles, 12 were fought on that day, twice as many as on Thursday, which is second in the competition.

Is Africa, the "dark" continent, to be the first to use automobiles in place of railways? More than 50 are building by a Paris factory for service of this sort in the Congo Free State.

Spring is the season of sweet peace. Also of sweet peas.

It's "glove contest" in the prize-fight news, and "bloody battle" in the political column, but it means fisticuffs, either way. Great is English—as she is spoke.

Alfred Austin's new book is called "Spring and Summer in Ireland." He must be doing his duty as poet laureate while Victoria is in Dublin.

More than 34,000 men are idle in Chicago as the result of the strike there. It has cost them $25,000,000 in lost wages, $25,000,000 in work is tied up and only one of 2300 contractors is doing any work. The strike has lasted nearly two months. There is a sermon in those facts.

The St. Louis woman who threw acid in her husband's face is named Lovely. Perhaps, however, in asking what's in that name, I should add that she declares her husband was cruel to her. And he had the name first, anyhow.

Dewey has spoken; now it is up to Roosevelt, the man-with-the-mouth-full-of-teeth. How about it, Teddy?

The old Federal building, at Third and Olive streets, is to be cleaned; new doors are to be put up, and it is to be painted inside. Meanwhile the "new" one, at Eighth and Olive streets, remains as before. That's the government of it; we ask for bread and they give us stone, so to speak. I'll wager more persons pass the "new" Federal building in a day than know that the old one is on earth—yet, when we ask for lights "and a bath for the uptown" one, they clean up the one near the river!

There's a house in Olive street that might be called the tramp's terror. Upstairs, in front of a window, is a mirror attached to a bracket and so adjusted that it reflects every one who rings the doorbell. All the occupants have to do is to glance in the mirror when any one comes. Beside the window is the button that releases Towser. It's a good scheme.

The Government is to issue postage stamps in books of 12, 24 and 48, with oiled paper interleaves. Thus another game of loss to man—the stick-together stamp—will be avoided.

It was "Boer Sympathizers' Meeting" in the call, but the intelligent compositor set it up "Beer Sympathizers." The hall wouldn't hold the crowd that gathered—till the crowd learned the truth.

"Boro-Formalin" (Elmer & Amend) as an antiseptic, cleansing mouth and tooth-wash, is unsurpassed.

BANNER TO NINTH WARD CLUBS

Reward for the Largest Enrollment of Members in the City.

Chairman Theodore D. Kalbfell of the Republican City Committee Sunday night presented to the United Republican Clubs of the Ninth Ward a banner valued at $500, as a reward for the largest enrollment of members in the city. The ceremony took place at Concordia Turner Hall, Thirteenth and Arsenal streets.

BURGLARS WERE BOLD

ENTERED LOUIS FELBERS' HOUSE WHILE OFFICERS WATCHED.

DAUGHTER SCARED THEM OFF.

Two Policemen Across the Street Saw Nothing of Them—They Secured $40 Cash and a Gold Watch.

Burglars and sneak thieves are holding high carnival in South St. Louis despite the vigilance of Capt. Young's police and during the past few days have escaped with much plunder.

Friday evening while the family was at dinner three bold burglars looted the residence of Louis Felbers, at 1522 Menard street, although two policeman were standing across the street at the very time. Mr. Felbers is a retired contractor and owns the house in which he lives and the one next door which is occupied by his son. Friday evening his son and family were at Felbers' for dinner. It was a few minutes after 6 o'clock when the family sat down to the table. Miss Mary Felbers had occasion to get up from the table and go upstairs. The gas was burning low in the hall up stairs and the young lady was in a hurry. As she reached the head of the stairs she was astonished and frightened to see the form of a big powerful man standing in front of the door opening into her father's room.

The man was roughly dressed and his face was covered with a thick growth of stubby dark beard. A slouch hat covered much of the upper part of his face. Miss Felbers was so badly frightened that she could not move nor speak at first. Before she had regained her composure the big fellow walked up to her side and requested her to keep silent. He displayed no weapon but he spoke to Miss Felbers in a tone that showed that he was in earnest when he told her he would kill her if she made any alarm. Then the tall man entered her father's room and spoke in a whisper to two other men, who, after a brief whispered conference made a hasty exit by means of the front hall and door.

Miss Felbers then hastened downstairs where she related what had occurred. Her brother and father ran out of the front door to see if they could get any trace of the burglars. They were nowhere to be seen, but across the street were two policemen in uniform who were laughing and talking. Felbers crossed the street and talked with them. Neither of the policemen had noticed the three men as they ran out of the Felbers house and disappeared.

Then Mr. Felbers asked the policemen to go across and inspect the house. Only one room had been invaded by the thieves, but it looked as though a cyclone had passed through this room. Drawers had been emptied and the contents scattered all over the room. From one of the dresser drawers two $20 gold pieces and a valuable gold watch had been taken. Nothing beside this was taken so far as known.

The police reported the robbery and two special officers were sent to work up the case. They looked wise and told the Felbers to keep quiet about the matter and by no means to speak to the newspapers about the robbery, as that would prevent the recovery of the property. The news of the robbery was successfully suppressed until Monday, but no trace of the thieves or the goods stolen has been found.

Twice last week was William Smith's home ransacked by burglars. Smith lives at 1517 Menard street. The first time his place was visited his best suit of clothes was taken. The last time his second best suit and all of his clean linen was taken.

A sneak thief gave Mrs. Mary Held, who lives on Carroll street near Menard, a lot of trouble last Friday. She had finished washing and had placed her clean linen on the line to dry. Then she went across to the grocers, and when she came back every stitch of her washing was gone.

A CHURCH CONTROVERSY ON

Pastor and Vestrymen of Mt. Calvary Protestant Episcopal Congregation Are at Outs.

The controversy between the vestrymen and rector, the Rev. Philip Williams Fauntleroy of Mount Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church, Grand and Lafayette avenues, will be on again Monday evening, when the election of the vestrymen for the coming year is to be held. Mr. Fauntleroy, by resolutions passed April 11, 1899, was asked to resign. He refused and has since continued his pastorate in the face of opposition.

Contemporary Club Meeting.—At the next meeting of the Contemporary Club, April 17, the leading address will be given by Rev. S. M. Crothers of Cambridge, Mass. His subject will be "A Plea for an Appreciative Rather Than a Critical Attitude Toward Literature."

THE IDOL OF THE TURF.

The Most Popular Jockey in America and England Recommends Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

No jockey has ever appealed so strongly to public favor as Tod Sloan.

He has achieved more than his most noted predecessors ever attempted and stands in a class by himself.

Not satisfied with his successes in his native country, he went to England, and now his fame as a successful horseman is on the tip of every tongue, not only in this country and England, but in every section of the globe where racing has found favor.

When Tod first went to England his temerity was openly laughed at, but the little American played skittles with his English rivals and his victories made all England gasp.

Having the stamp of royal approval, society both at home and abroad "lionize" him, and he is feted and petted to an extent that would turn an ordinary mortal's head.

The great jockey was in such demand socially, and dined and wined to such an extent that it was feared his health would give way. Too much society and the nervous strain of racing told on him.

A two weeks' trip to America made him acquainted with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and their remarkably restorative effects on a depleted digestive apparatus, and he recommended them in unstinted terms to a friend, saying: "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the best thing I know of for keeping the stomach in condition and appetite in good repair."

Thousands of former dyspeptics can vouch for the truth of Tod Sloan's words, as "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets" have become a household word in America, and few familes are without them. One or two taken after meals keep the stomach sweet by causing prompt and healthy digestion of the food.

Perfectly healthy people use them after heavy dinners to keep their good health and to make sure that no ill effects will follow an unusually hearty meal.

Your druggist will tell you, or your doctor either, that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are composed only of digestive ferments, Asceptic Pepsin, Hydrastis, fruit acids, etc., and for the strong stomach, as well as the m[illegible] delicate, constitute a safeguard ag[illegible] indigestion and stomach troubles.

SANG TO THE GALLERY.

ROGERS BROTHERS GIVE THE GODS A NEW TUNE.

ST. LOUIS PLAY AT HOPKINS.

Good Opening Night's at Havlin's and the Columbia—The Rehan Engagement Begins at Olympic To-Night.

The gallery at the Century learned a new tune Sunday evening. You have probably heard the gods, and others, too, for that matter, whistling it, and wondered what it was. Well, it's called "Beware of an Innocent Maid," and it is the most catchy tune of a score of similar airs sung by the Rogers Brothers and their versatile company in their new musical comedy, "Rogers Brothers in Wall Street."

Just exactly why the entertainment should be given this name does not appear. It might just as well be Rogers Brothers at Coney Island or Elberon. The chief thing seems to be that it is the Rogers Brothers. But they are not the whole show by a whole lot. There are 30 or 40 others, mostly young women with fair musical ability, and two or three with more than the average talent. For instance, there's Maud Raymond, with her rag-time songs; Jeanette Bogeard, with songs and dances, and Ada Lewis, who has become world-famous as the Bowery Girl. They are all favorites in St. Louis and they and the Rogers Brothers were given such a reception Sunday evening as would have pleased the most exacting.

As to the quality of the entertainment an opinion concerning it must be based largely upon the point of view. The gallery went wild over it. The balcony was vociferous in its applause, while the parquette and boxes gave frequent evidence of approbation. The piece was played to the gallery and the gallery knew it and returned the compliment. That's why all the gallery is whistling "Beware of an Innocent Maid." If you enjoy this sort of entertainment you will seldom find a better.

The Rogers Brothers will be at the Century all the week. Next week will be "The Belle of New York."

There is folk-lore and comedy and melodrama, with a background of Tennessee hills; with love as rough as the rocks and boulders that reflect the life of the characters that walk through the scenes of "A Romance of Coon Hollow," at Havlin's this week. Besides all this there is a considerable interest in the plot of the piece, which is entirely lacking in originality, inasmuch as it is strongly reminiscent (in its construction) of "M'liss," "A Mountain Pink" and others of the same kind that obtained much vogue in their day and generation.

But "Coon Hollow" has melodramatic tendencies, and the most villainous villainy is allowed to stalk through its four acts, leaving behind it a trail of trouble and misfortune that is only checked in time to allow the happy climax that attends the fall of the last curtain on a properly constructed melodrama of the virulent type.

There are some pretty scenes used in telling the story of "Coon Hollow" and of the doings of the people in that strange environment—the Tennessee Mountains—and the company interpreting it is in most respects capable. The best work is shared in by Stanley Johns, as Lem Stockwell, Madge Neville as Clyde Harrod and Louise Arnot as Mrs. Buhymer.

The levee scene, participated in by an auxiliary company of colored performers, singers, dancers and comedians, is an attractive feature and earned enthusiastic applause for its participants.

To-night William J. Counihan, the advertising agent of Havlin's and the Grand, has a benefit. In addition to the play there will be local prize contests in buck and wing dancing, bag punching and other local features, among the latter being several songs by Al Blanchard, who has volunteered his services for the occasion.

At Hopkins' Imperial, Sunday afternoon, the returning stock company, which had been in Chicago for two weeks, was given a rousing reception. The effect of Holy Week was apparent, yet many of the regulars were on hand to welcome their favorites. "In the Ozarks" was the play presented. It is a new melodrama, by a St. Louisan, Charles Gildehaus, and it has all of the requisites of a thriller. There is a dam and an artificial lake, several pairs of lovers and a double-dyed villain. Miss Evesson, Maurice Freeman and Edward Boring have the leading parts. A better medium to afford the hard-worked members of the company a rest after three weeks of Chicago could not have been selected.

At the Olympic Monday night Ada Rehan will appear as Lady Teazle in "The School for Scandal." Her engagement is for the week, during which she will appear in four of her favorite parts. Tuesday night "The School for Scandal" will be repeated, to be followed Wednesday, both at the matinee and in the evening, by "As You Like It." The other two plays presented will be "The Country Girl" and "The Taming of the Shrew."

T. W. Eckert and Emma Berg head the bill at the Columbia this week in a dainty operetta, entitled "Little Pee Weet." The scene is laid in Japan and is represented by a special setting which Mr. Eckert and Miss Berg carry with them. Though only an operetta, it has several good solos which are equally divided between the two singers.

Walter Le Roy and Florence Clayton present their amusing sketch, "Hogan of the Hansom." It was written by George M. Cohan and is full of laughable situations, which are worked for their full value.

La Petite Mathilde, who in private life is Mathilde Berry of St. Lous, makes her appearance as a volinist. Her selections are difficult and are executed with a technique that speaks volumes for her future as a performer. She does the very clever feat of playing for her own dancing.

Andy Amann is another St. Louisan who helps to make time pass pleasantly. With the assistance of Frances Hartley he presents a German dialect comedy, called "A Clear Case."

Other good things at the Columbia are: Harris and Fields, who feature themselves as "butchers of English," and live up to the idea; O'Brien and Buckley, musical comiques; Deaves' marionettes; Charles A. Gardner, who does a turn which shows his versatility in the use of German, Irish and French dialects; Jim and Fanny Donovan, who tell some good stores; May Wentworth, in musical monologue, which might be improved by more music and less monologue; Hodgkins and Leith, in a rural comedietta, "Seth and Gladdin, song and dance comedians, and the Kinodrome.

On Monday night, April 16, with the Frohman Company in "Because She Loved Him So" as the attraction a benefit will be tendered Dick Richey, assistant treasurer, and J. A. Streeper, doorkeeper at the Olympic. These gentlemen are two of the most popular men on the Olympic staff and a crowded house is certain.

"The Girl From Chili," which is at the Grand this week, offers nothing new in the farce line and is not up to the average merit of the "girl" plays with which the stage has been swamped recently. It tells the story of a young and pretty Chilian heiress who comes to America and shows her admiration for the country by promptly falling in love with every man she meets. The fun is supposed to grow out of an effort of one of the men whom she is anxious to marry to escape her by disguising himself as a woman. The lines are dull and lifeless, making the efforts of the players to be funny appear strained.

The company presenting it is better than the farce. The work of De Witt Clinton, Frank Bacon and Edna Elmere is satisfactory. Miss Elsmere is the "Girl' and does not require any make-up to represent the Spanish type of beauty.

Specialties are introduced by Gus Tate, Miss Elsemere and Miss Fay Courtenay, the latter using two pickaninnies.

Folowing "The Girl From Chili" will be Corinne in "The Little Host," in which she will be able to show her ability as a comedienne.

Holy week, as announced, will be a dark week at Music Hall, when the Castle Square Opera Company will spend its time preparing for the production of Tannhauser, beginning Easter Monday.

The Nethersole incident has furnished the burlesquers with a fund of material and this is being taken advantage of by Jacobs & Lowry's "Merry Maidens" Company down at the Standard, where, besides a first-rate curtain-raiser and an olio bill, a burlesque on "Sappho" is being presented. Monday night is benefit night at the Standard. Leo Reichenbach, the advertising agent, being tendered one by the management and his friends.

SPECTACLES SAVED HIM.

Thin Barrier of Steel Stood Between Watchman Dougherty and Death.

The rim of Watchman James Dougherty's spectacles defeated the bullet that he aimed at himself as his night vigil was closing Sunday morning at the Country Club, St. Louis County.

The spectacle rim was driven into the skull ahead of the bullet, this breaking the force of the missile. Dr. H. W. Caster extracted the foreign particles at the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium. Dougherty was despondent over a recent accident to his little son.

How "Orangeine" Became Public.

Early in 1895 Mr. William Gillette, the distinguished author-actor, in his necessitated search for health, came within the reach of Dr. Aikman's care. Mr. Gillette experienced such relief and cure from Dr. Aikman's prescription that for years he has carried "Orangeine" on his travels for the benefit of his company and friends. He became finally so impressed by its remedial results that in October, 1898, he related his experiences to an old school friend, Mr. Charles L. Bartlett, of Chicago. Mr. Bartlett submitted the formula to his trusted family physician, Dr. C. F. Ely, who pronounced it "wonderfully useful, through its far-reaching efficacy and absolute harmlessness." Other prominent physicians gave the same verdict, and early in January, 1899, "Orangeine" was publicly launched under the full sail of its manifold claims, which originated from the oft-repeated experience of Dr. Aikman. (See Lesson No. 3.)

CHASING OF A RABBIT.

OUTSIDERS DESCRIPTION OF A COURSING MATCH.

THREE OUT OF 15 ESCAPED.

Holes in a Wall Afford Escape Providing the Rabbit Reaches Them Ahead of the Hounds.

"No more chance than a rabbit."—
Current slang similie which originated on the coursing field.

Exhibitions of coursing were given at Pastime Park Sunday. Judging from the slang similie which had its origin in these exhibitions, the advertised designation, "matches" does not apply.

The coursing field is about 300 yards long and about 150 yards wide.

Along this field long-eared rabbits fled in terror from their pursuers. The field was surrounded by a wall made of canvas. At fixed distances near the goal end of the wall there were small holes in the base-board, through which the rabbits were to escape.

Sunday afternoon there were 15 rabbits in the various events and three of them escaped death.

The "slipper" let one rabbit out of the pen, onto the course. The rabbit was given about 100 yards' start, then two hounds were turned loose.

The hounds shoot through space with the velocity of an arrow. From the start the rabbit seemed to have an intuition that he was being pursued, laid back its black-tipped ears and skimmed over the green with a skip and a lope that kept it in the air as much as on the ground.

Sometimes the chase is only of a moment's duration; again it extends over a period of five minutes, and in a very few cases the rabbit dodges through one of the exits and is saved.

The speed was wonderful. It had almost reached an exit. Another rod would have placed it beyond all danger but it slipped and fell and a hound was upon it in a second.

The hound grabbed the rabbt by the back, crushed the life out of it and torsed the carcass to one side, then trotted back to receive the caresses of its master.

There was much sameness to the event. The interest was only varied by the difference in relative sprinting ability of the rabbts and hounds.

When the slipper released a rabbit, a man at either side of the chute would shake a handkerchief, which frightened the animal into immediate fight.

The hounds bounded out in close pursuit. All that the spectators could see was two black-tipped ears, a bunch of cottontail whisking through space and the outstretched, leaping, panting form of the hound.

As fast as the rabbits were killed they were picked up, deposited in a gunny sack and carried off the field. Boys were in waiting, begging for them.

Secretary Benson of the St. Louis Coursing Club said:

"The coursing at Pastime Park, we know, has often been cruel, owing to the limited dimensions of the place, and for that reason we have concluded to give up coursing in so far as holding our meetings there is concerned. We have as good as closed a lease on 60 acres of ground on the Suburban, near Normandy, and the next coursing season will see the sport conducted as it should be, and on a field that will give the "jacks" a chance to get away.

"As soon as the weather got warm the "jacks" fell easy victims to their pursuers. Then the sport became cruel and we are just as happy as any one else over the termination of the season coursing will be conducted as it should be, and on a much bigger field."

APPROVED THE SINGLE TAX.

Rev. Dr. Samuel Sale's Sermon Sunday at Temple Shaare Emeth.

Rev. Doctor Samuel Sale in his discourse on Socialism Sunday at Temple Shaare Emeth, pronounced in favor of the single-tax in these words: "If the single-tax as a social remedy cannot be realized as a whole, it points, at least, to some of the most flagrant wrongs that might easily be cured. For instance, a large measure of responsibility to the common weal might be achieved by the general introduction of an inheritance tax. We might abolish the right to collateral inheritance."
